Overview

On Saturday, 26 October 2024, the Electoral Commission of Queensland (ECQ) delivered the 2024 State general election of Members of Parliament to represent each of Queensland's 93 electorates. The ECQ also simultaneously delivered a by-election to fill a vacancy in the office of the councillor of division 4 in the Ipswich City Council.

The State general election followed the dissolution of the Queensland Parliament and the issue of the writ by Her Excellency the Honourable Dr Jeannette Young AC PSM, Governor of Queensland on Tuesday, 1 October 2024. In Queensland, parliamentary elections must be held every four years on the last Saturday in October, in accordance with section 19B of the Constitution of Queensland 2001.

Planning for the October 2024 State general election incorporated the experiences and findings from the review of the March 2024 local government elections, with a wide range of process and planning improvements implemented to enhance the voter experience. This included increasing capacity at early voting centres and election day polling booths, expanding early voting opening hours, increasing the election workforce and expanding training, and purchasing over 4,000 additional laptops to mark electors off the electoral roll.

The election was supported by a comprehensive advertising and awareness-raising program. The Vote on what counts to you campaign was delivered across multiple channels and promoted key information and election dates. Direct communications were delivered to electors through the hard copy and electronic Voter Information Card, and SMS alerts during early voting and on election day.

An additional campaign to raise awareness of misinformation and disinformation was also delivered and supported by the ECQ's Election facts web page and register. The Stop and Consider – Election Facts advertising campaign encouraged electors to consider whether information shared during the election was factual.

The ECQ supported electoral participants (candidates, registered political parties and third parties) with information and advice on how to comply with their funding, disclosure and compliance requirements and provided ongoing support prior to, during and after the election, to assist with any queries.

Voting in these elections was compulsory and was conducted using the full preferential voting system. A total of 3,683,368 Queenslanders were eligible to vote in the election at the close of rolls on Saturday, 5 October 2024. Turnout at the 2024 State general election totalled 87.75 per cent, corresponding to 3,232,148 votes counted.

This report provides an overview of the delivery of the election, including services, results and post-election activities.

Opportunities for improvement identified through a rigorous independent evaluation of this event and the March 2024 local government elections will inform the ECQ's service planning for future elections.

Planning and preparation

The ECQ delivers major State and local government elections every four years. While the ECQ also provides other services during an electoral cycle, it follows four distinct phases as it prepares for and delivers Queensland's quadrennial elections.

The four phases (Assess, Plan, Prepare and Deliver) are illustrated below.

The short timeframe of approximately six months between the March local government elections and October State general election posed both a logistical challenge for the ECQ in delivering two major events in succession, and opportunities to apply learnings and make improvements between events.

Early planning for the October 2024 State general election was undertaken concurrently with planning for the March 2024 local government elections during 2023. Following the March local government elections, an external evaluation was conducted and a report released which included recommendations to address certain issues experienced on election day in March 2024.

The ECQ accepted all recommendations from the evaluation and applied the lessons learned into planning for this election to further enhance the voter experience. The ECQ also undertook an operational review, implementing new governance arrangements and updating critical project plans to manage risk and ensure effective delivery of election services.

As with previous elections and in line with the ECQ's election assurance activities focusing on people, processes and systems, election rehearsal activities were conducted prior to the event to ensure all three were aligned and ready for election delivery.

The rehearsals successfully identified and addressed a number of operational issues prior to the election. The timely conduct of the rehearsals served to increase election focus and awareness at all levels of the organisation, significantly adding to the value of the exercise.

The ECQ will consider how rehearsal activities may add further organisational value by being embedded as a routine business process across the four-year election cycle, while still retaining pre-event rehearsals to confirm election readiness.

Budget and funding

The ECQ received an initial funding allocation of $47.9 million over three financial years to conduct the 2024 State general election.

Following the local government elections in March 2024, the ECQ implemented key business improvements for the State general election, aimed at enhancing the voter experience in the areas of planning and capacity, workforce, communication, and data analytics.

As a result, an additional supplementary appropriation of $15.5 million was sought and received and Queensland Treasury also approved for the ECQ to draw down $8.7 million of centrally held contingency allocation funding. This brought the total allocation to $72.1 million. These improvements increased the expected cost per elector to an estimated $19.56 against the initial estimate of $12.97.

The main drivers of the increase in cost per elector included (but were not limited to):

- increasing planned capacity for early and election day voting to ensure adequate resources were available and services could be adjusted to accommodate voter behaviour
- expanding early voting opening hours from 8.00am to 6.00pm at all early voting centres operating during the two-week early voting period
- increasing the total election workforce, with an expansion of the total number of temporary election staff from approximately 7,300 staff filling over 8,000 positions at the local government elections to more than 19,000 positions for the State general election, and
- purchasing an additional 4,000 laptops to increase electoral roll mark off capacity at polling places.

The overall election budget and cost per elector is subject to the completion of post-election compliance and evaluation activities which are currently underway.

Stakeholder engagement

The ECQ engaged with key State and federal agencies in planning the State general election to ensure access to specialised advice. These agencies included the:

- Queensland Police Service
- Department of Justice and the Attorney-General (now the Department of Justice)
- Australian Electoral Commission
- eSafety Commissioner
- Counter Foreign Interference Coordination Centre, Department of Home Affairs, and
- Australia Signals Directorate.

The main objectives of this inter-agency collaboration were to:

- raise awareness with relevant agencies of the scope, scale and timeline of the election in order to anticipate risks and impacts that could impact the successful delivery of the election
- consult with those agencies to implement appropriate and responsive measures to those risks, and
- receive specialist advice from those agencies regarding public safety, online safety, intelligence and response actions to natural disasters and implement that advice into processes and delivery planning.

The ECQ also collaborated with the Australian Government's Electoral Integrity Assurance Taskforce, meeting regularly in the lead up to the election and on election day, to support the ECQ in monitoring threats of potential interference at the election.

First Nations engagement

The ECQ increased its focus on delivering culturally inclusive elections to encourage electoral participation by First Nations Queenslanders ahead of the 2024 elections.

Through its First Nations Engagement Strategy, released in July 2023, the ECQ is working to enhance engagement with First Nations communities, improve the delivery of culturally appropriate electoral services and increase cultural awareness for ECQ staff.

The ECQ's First Nations Engagement Officer supported the ECQ to respond to the needs of First Nations Queenslanders leading up to, during and following the 2024 State general election.

Prior to the election, the First Nations Engagement Officer visited the First Nations communities of Mapoon, Napranum, Aurukun, Mornington Island, Doomadgee, Hope Vale, Wujal Wujal, Yarrabah and Cherbourg. The purpose of these visits was to discuss the upcoming election and the differences between the State general election and the local government elections held in March 2024.

During the election period, the First Nations Engagement Officer was based in Cairns to support election delivery in Far North Queensland communities and also travelled to Mareeba, Thursday Island, Aurukun, Lockhart River and Yarrabah. The First Nations Engagement Officer also participated in several interviews on local and national Indigenous radio stations to promote the importance of voting in the State general election.

The outcomes of election delivery in First Nations communities are being considered by the ECQ to continue to improve understanding of the needs of First Nations Queenslanders.

Election service plan

The ECQ undertook an operational review following the local government elections in March 2024, and incorporated the lessons learned into project planning for the October State general election.

The ECQ released its 2024 State General Election Service Plan on 9 September 2024, detailing how the ECQ would deliver the 2024 State general election.

Structured around a set of principles informed by the ECQ's Strategic Plan 2024–2028, the plan guided the ECQ's approach to election planning and delivery and detailed a number of service improvements that were implemented following the local government elections in March 2024.

The plan also outlined key milestones, services and activities, including voter services, staffing, resources and technology, information for candidates and parties, as well as post-election activities. The plan is available on the ECQ website<sup>1</sup>.

Election delivery

The 2024 State general election commenced with the dissolution of the Legislative Assembly of Queensland's 57th Parliament and the issue of the writ on Tuesday, 1 October 2024 and continued until the final declaration and return of the writ on Tuesday, 12 November 2024.

Key election statistics

The ECQ's election preparations focused on maximising voter participation by increasing capacity for early and election day voting to ensure adequate resources were available and services could be adjusted to accommodate voter behaviour.

More than 3.23 million eligible Queensland electors cast a ballot to elect Queensland's 93 Members of Parliament.

Overall voter turnout at the 2024 State general election decreased slightly from the 2020 election, from 87.92 per cent to 87.75 per cent. The result indicates a continued high level of voter awareness of the election, supported by the ECQ's activities to engage with voters, and deliver a comprehensive communication and engagement program.

Informality rates at the 2024 State general election increased slightly from the 2020 election, with the informality rate at 3.9 per cent compared to 3.4 per cent in 2020.

Following major elections, the ECQ conducts an analysis of a sample of informal ballots to determine the level of intentionality of informal voting. The outcomes of the review for the 2024 State general election are detailed in the post-election activities section of this report.

Voter behaviour

In preparation for the 2024 State general election, the ECQ incorporated lessons learned during the March local government elections and increased planned capacity at early voting centres and election day polling booths to service a range of potential demand.

To ensure voters had the maximum opportunity to vote using their preferred method, an embedded contingency model for in-person voting was implemented to accommodate potentially higher early and election day turnout. Overall service delivery was planned to accommodate turnout percentages of 45 per cent of all electors during early voting, 45 per cent election day voting, 15 per cent postal voting and 5 per cent via other channels.

Early voting opening hours were expanded to provide more choice and flexibility for voters. Polling was conducted from 8.00am to 6.00pm at all early voting centres operating during the two-week early voting period. This represented an expansion from the early voting hours in March 2024 which were 9.00am to 5.00pm except for the final day of early voting, when polling continued until 6.00pm.

07 Election delivery

Additionally, the ECQ actively promoted the availability of early voting options and expanded operating hours, including through advertising, media and social media messaging, and direct elector communications. These initiatives aimed to better distribute electoral service demand across the voting period.

Subsequently, there was a significant increase in early voting, with approximately 50 per cent of all votes cast during the early voting period compared to approximately 39 per cent at the March local government elections. Postal voting rates also increased to 16 per cent compared to 13 per cent in March 2024; however, use of postal voting remains below the levels experienced during the COVID-19 pandemic.

One key difference between State and local government elections is the ability for electors to vote anywhere in Queensland (absentee voting). This flexibility may also contribute to higher turnouts at State elections, including use of convenient early voting options for electors travelling or outside their electorate during the early voting period.

Voting behaviour over time

Election day voting returned to the levels seen during the COVID-19 pandemic, with approximately 32 per cent of votes cast on election day, down from 46 per cent in March 2024.

Participation (voter turnout) and informality rates are illustrated in the heat maps in Appendix C and Appendix D, which display turnout and informality by percentage on a statewide basis.

Turnout

Turnout at the 2024 State general election totalled 87.75 per cent, corresponding to 3.23 million votes counted.

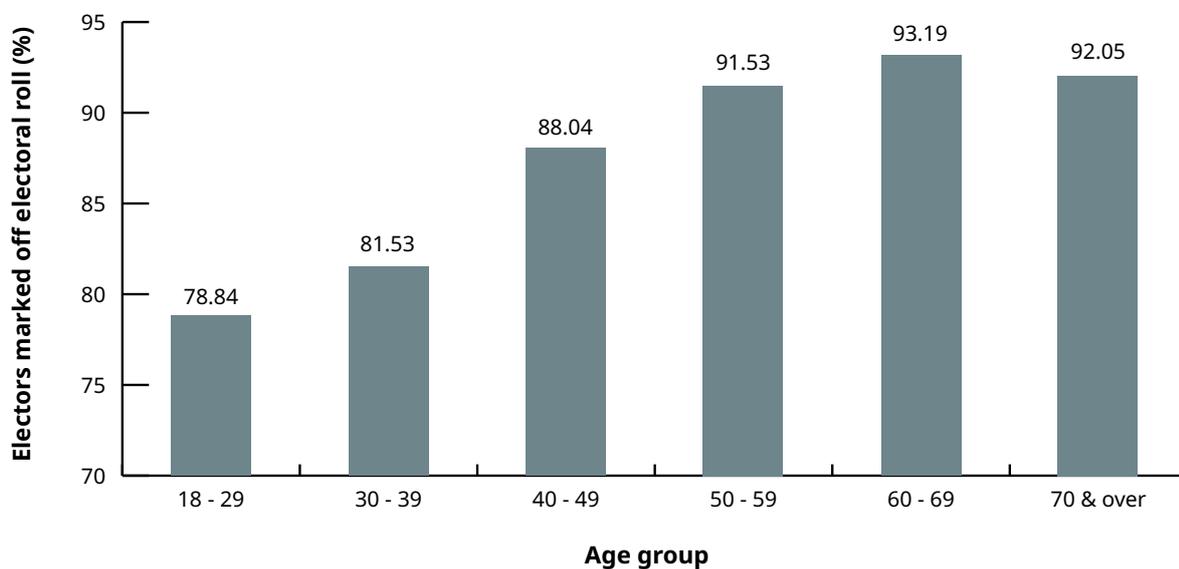

The overall turnout rate decreased slightly from the 87.92 per cent recorded at the 2020 State general election, however, turnout was more than five per cent higher than the 82.31 per cent recorded at the local government elections held in March 2024.

This small decrease in turnout compared to the 2020 State general election is reflective of a downward trend in voter turnout throughout Australia. The Federal Direct Enrolment and Update program, led by the Australian Electoral Commission, uses data collected by government agencies to add new electors to the roll or update existing electors' details. While this has led to increases in enrolment of the eligible population, in recent years the program may have, to some extent, affected the decline in participation rate through the addition of electors who had previously avoided enrolling and voting.

There is also considerable variation in voter turnout between electorates, driven by demographic factors such as socioeconomic status, cultural and linguistic diversity and geography. The Traeger and Cook electorates, which encompass inland central and north Queensland, had the lowest turnouts in Queensland (74.49 and 74.88 per cent respectively), and consistent with the 2020 election, the Moggill electorate had the highest turnout at 93.20 per cent. This follows the broad pattern of voter participation, with higher turnout in Brisbane and its surrounds, and lower turnout in north and western Queensland. These regional variations are likely partially driven by demographic factors that impact turnout. The heat maps in Appendix C display turnout by percentage for all 93 electorates.

A persistent issue with turnout is youth electoral participation. As shown in the following graph, the proportion of electors who were marked off the electoral roll was lowest among the 18 to 29 age group at 78.84 per cent. Turnout increases with age, peaking at 93.19 per cent for the 60 to 69 age group. These trends, as well as any other demographic factors that may emerge in further analysis, will be considered by the ECQ to design and deliver services that meet the needs of these groups and, by extension, aim to increase turnout across Queensland.

Mark off of electors by age

Election services

The ECQ provides a variety of services to enable eligible Queenslanders to enrol and vote at local government and state elections. These encompass a variety of voting and assistance services to help voters participate in the elections and have confidence in the integrity of the electoral process.

Enrolment

The ECQ and the Australian Electoral Commission work collaboratively to manage the Queensland electoral roll, ensuring eligible Queensland citizens are enrolled to vote and their enrolment details are current. At the end of October 2024, the Australian Electoral Commission estimated approximately 97.7 per cent of eligible Queenslanders were enrolled.

The deadline for updates to enrolment for the 2024 State general election was Saturday, 5 October 2024, with 3,683,368 Queensland electors enrolled to vote at the election. While new and updated enrolments could still be submitted until the day prior to election day, voters who updated their details during this period would have been asked to complete a declaration vote. This enables the ECQ to verify enrolment details prior to admitting valid declaration votes into the count.

Over 45,000 declaration votes were cast during early voting and on election day. These votes were reviewed by Returning Officers and other temporary election staff to determine each elector's entitlement to vote in the electorate where they declared they lived. Of these, 29,278 (0.91 per cent of votes counted) were accepted when reviewed against the updated electoral roll at the close of the early voting period.

Voting channels

Early voting

Early voting fast facts
210 early voting centres	1.6 million votes cast	91% voter satisfaction

The early voting period ran from Monday, 14 October to Friday, 25 October 2024 (excluding the weekend). To enhance the voter experience from the March local government elections, early voting opening hours were expanded across all early voting centres, from 8.00am to 6.00pm during the two-week early voting period. All early voting centre addresses and operating hours were made available through the dedicated 'Find my polling booth' search functionality on the ECQ website.

There were 210 early voting centres open across Queensland during the early voting period. Approximately 1.6 million votes were cast (around 50 per cent of votes counted) at an early voting centre, reducing the number of people required to cast a vote on election day. This is compared to approximately 1.2 million early votes cast in 2020 (43.13 per cent of votes counted).

The ECQ planned for early voting services to accommodate 45 per cent of enrolled electors to vote during the period, increasing the number of early voting centres, expanding hours and boosting staff levels from the March local government elections. Field reports and post-election surveys indicate that these changes enabled the electors who voted early to be serviced comfortably. The majority of voters who used early voting venues surveyed in the post-election survey of electors reported that they did not have to queue (74 per cent) and about half received their ballot paper in a shorter time than expected (54 per cent). Overall voter satisfaction of people who voted early measured at 91 per cent.

While the changes to early voting services was largely positive, difficulties were reported in some areas about capacity to engage the allocated number of staff to operate the early voting centres. The ECQ will conduct further analysis of voter trends at the electorate and venue level to improve resource planning and allocation in the future.

Election day voting

The number of Queenslanders choosing to vote on election day has generally declined across recent election cycles, punctuated by a significant decrease to around 30 per cent of all votes cast at the 2020 elections held during the COVID-19 pandemic.

However, there was a significant shift back toward election day voting at the March 2024 local government elections, with around 46 per cent of in-person votes being cast on election day.

To maximise opportunities for electors to vote using their preferred method at the State general election, service capacity was increased during both the early voting period and on election day. Voter turnout in each electorate was monitored on a daily basis to anticipate possible election day turnout and ensure the allocation of appropriate staffing. This approach allowed flexibility for the ECQ to redeploy resources across the election period based on actual voter demand and allocate additional counting staff in places where there were large numbers of early votes to be counted on election night.

Across Queensland, 1,168 polling booths were open from 8.00am to 6.00pm on election day. Approximately 1.03 million electors cast a vote on election day, correlating to around 32 per cent of all votes counted. This represents a significant reduction from the election day turnout experienced in March 2024, and is very close to the election day turnout experienced at the pandemic-affected 2020 election.

Field reports and post-election surveys indicate that this approach enabled the electors who voted on election day to be serviced comfortably. The majority of election day voters surveyed in the post-election survey of electors reported that they did not have to queue (65 per cent) and about half received their ballot paper in a shorter time than expected (56 per cent). Overall voter satisfaction of election day voters measured at 83 per cent.

Given the fluctuations in early voting and election day turnout over successive elections, the ECQ will continue to analyse voter sentiment and trends to refine its resourcing model at the electorate and venue level to ensure an appropriate level of staffing at future elections.

Postal voting

Postal voting applications opened from Monday, 9 September 2024, and closed at 7.00pm Monday, 14 October 2024. Applications could be submitted online through the ECQ website, by telephone or through completing an application form.

Online	Phone	Application forms (physical and by email)	Special postal voters
390,166	53,301	180,468	73,033

Any Queensland elector is able to apply for a postal vote and some electors are enrolled as ‘special postal voters’ who automatically have their voting materials mailed to them. For the 2024 State general election, the ECQ issued approximately 700,000 postal votes to electors including those who applied and special postal voters.

Queensland electors who are overseas or interstate at the time of an election are also able to use postal voting to cast their vote. The ECQ mailed over 70,000 postal ballots to these electors (4,872 overseas and 67,051 interstate) for this election.

Where’s my postal vote?

Although a postal vote application can be lodged well in advance of election day, ballot papers, including postal ballots, can only be produced at the conclusion of the candidate nomination period and the ballot order draw.

Once this occurs, the ECQ must undertake a rigorous quality assurance process to ensure that each ballot paper correctly displays information such as the candidate names in the correct order, the details of the election and the instructions for completing the ballot paper.

The proofing of ballot papers must be completed that same evening following the ballot paper draw, to ensure the timely supply of ballot papers across Queensland for both in person and postal voting.

Ballot paper printing often commences immediately after the proofing is complete and postal voting ballot papers are then progressively lodged with Australia Post for delivery.

All postal voters are required to complete their ballot papers before 6.00pm on election day, sign and witness the declaration and send their ballots in a reply-paid envelope to the Returning Officer. However, some electors who apply for a postal vote do not go on to vote using their postal ballot. For this election, approximately 120,000 people applied for a postal vote but voted another way.

Postal voting fast facts
691,890 postal ballots issued	67,051 to interstate electors	4,872 to overseas electors
532,168 postal ballots returned prior to the deadline		517,069 postal ballots accepted into the count

A total of 532,168 postal ballots (76.92 per cent of postal ballots issued) were returned prior to the deadline of 6.00pm Tuesday, 5 November 2024. Of these, 517,069 ballots were accepted into the count after scrutiny to ensure the declaration process was completed correctly (16.00 per cent of total votes counted).

This is a significant decrease from the 2020 State general election when over 700,000 postal ballots were accepted into the count. The high number of postal votes in 2020 can largely be attributed to the COVID-19 pandemic, driving more electors to choose postal voting.

All postal ballots received are subject to a scrutiny process to ensure they are validly cast. Those ballots which do not comply are rejected from the count. The postal vote rejection rate decreased to 2.84 per cent at the 2024 State general election, compared to 7.48 per cent at the 2020 State general election.

Following the local government and State elections held in 2020, the ECQ redesigned postal voting materials with the goal of maximising the number of correctly completed postal votes received by the ECQ. The materials featured simplified instructions regarding the steps to complete a valid postal vote and were supported by new communication resources including an animation on the ECQ website. The improvement in the postal vote rejection rate indicates the redesigned postal voting materials have resulted in improved elector understanding about how to complete their postal vote.

The majority of rejected postal ballots were the result of electors not complying with the Electoral Act, by either not signing the declaration envelope, or not having their declaration witnessed.

Postal vote applications from registered political parties

Registered political parties are entitled to access electoral roll information to engage with electors, including sending postal vote applications under the Electoral Act.

If an elector chooses to complete the application and use the reply-paid envelope provided by the political party, the application must be provided to the ECQ by the relevant political party.

It is the individual's choice whether to lodge a postal vote application through a political party or apply directly to the ECQ, however the ECQ encourages electors seeking a postal vote to apply directly with the ECQ, via the ECQ website or phone, as the most direct, timely and secure application method.

Regardless of how an application is made, the ECQ sends all postal ballot materials directly to the elector and their postal vote will only be returned to, and counted by, the ECQ.

Telephone voting

Telephone voting, also known as electronically assisted voting, is a resource intensive, yet very important service offered to eligible electors as prescribed under legislation. Its primary purpose is to provide a voting channel to electors who have accessibility challenges or who have no other available voting options, often including members of vulnerable populations.

Eligibility for telephone voting included the following categories:

- electors who have an impairment
- those who need assistance due to an insufficient literacy level
- special postal voters
- distance voters, who live more than 20 kilometres from a polling place, and
- out-of-state or overseas voters, including defence force personnel serving overseas.

Working in teams of two, with an issuing officer and witness, the average call time over the 11-day voting period was just under five minutes. Teams answered an average of 52 calls per day over the early voting period. Call volumes increased significantly on election day, with teams answering an average of 90.5 calls.

Ballot papers recording electors' telephone votes were sorted and dispatched to the Returning Officer of each electorate on the Monday following election day where the ballot papers were admitted to the count.

Queensland electors who are overseas or interstate at the time of an election are eligible to use telephone voting to cast their vote. For this election, 19,146 telephone votes were from electors who indicated they were either overseas or interstate. The 2024 telephone voting project issued a total of 22,318 votes (0.69 per cent of votes counted). By comparison, approximately 16,000 voters (0.53 per cent of votes counted) used the telephone voting service in 2020 during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Remote event management

In order to maximise electoral participation among First Nations electors living in Indigenous communities, the ECQ delivers accessible voting services for electors in some remote communities.

At previous State general elections, voting on election day has been the only option for electors in some First Nations communities. This is because early voting centres have been available in limited locations in the Cook electorate, making travel to an early voting centre up to four hours' drive for some electors. Additionally, postal voting is not viable in some First Nations communities due to restraints on postal services.

A limited early voting model was trialled in a number of First Nations communities in the Cook electorate for the 2024 State general election. Two election staff, including the First Nations Engagement Officer, travelled to Mapoon, Pormpuraaw, Kowanyama, Aurukun and Lockhart to conduct a single day of early voting during the early voting period. The early voting visit also provided an opportunity to conduct face-to-face training with temporary election staff engaged for election day.

In addition to the five communities included in the trial, remote polling was delivered in 15 islands across the Torres Strait. Details of remote area polling locations are at Appendix F.

The opportunity to vote on a day other than election day was well received by community members. The ECQ will continue to explore options to provide more flexible services in First Nations communities and refine communication approaches to ensure community members are aware of the availability of early voting.

Brisbane City Hall

Brisbane City Hall is an essential polling place and the flagship venue for statewide elections. Due to the large number of votes taken, the project is led by a dedicated ECQ project manager.

As with the local government elections in March, electors accessed Brisbane City Hall from the King George Square entrance, rather than the Ann Street entrance which was used in prior years. This small change enabled an easier and safer entry into the venue for electors and staff and allowed candidates and volunteers to use a larger area outside of the venue to engage with electors.

The ECQ uses City Hall as a voting centre as it is conveniently located for people who work in the Brisbane CBD, the growing number of people residing near Brisbane City, and people who are temporarily staying in Brisbane at the time of the election. As expected, electors using the City Hall voting centre were predominantly from the McConnel and surrounding electorates. However, electors from all 93 electorates, including Far North and South West Queensland, voted at City Hall.

The ECQ employed 33 temporary election staff at City Hall during early voting and 29 on election day to issue votes, direct electors, and handle enquiries. A further 43 count assistants joined the City Hall team on election night to perform preliminary counts for early voting and election day for all 93 electorates. After election night, votes were packaged for the respective Returning Officers and securely transferred to each electoral district to be included in their official and full preference counts.

Over 49,000 votes were taken at City Hall and were counted and sorted on election night. This is more than the total number of electors in most electorates in Queensland, which have an average enrolment of approximately 39,606 electors.

Ballot paper exchange

As electors can vote at any polling place in Queensland for a State general election, any ballot papers printed and cast outside of their electorate must be returned to their electorate for scrutiny and counting.

In the days following election day, over half a million ballot papers were securely exchanged between the electorate they were issued in and to the electorate they were issued for, through controlled in-person local exchanges and direct secure hand-to-hand courier services to and from the ECQ warehouse.

Once ballot papers were received by the Returning Officer in the electorates they were issued for, normal count or scrutiny procedures applied.

Accessibility services

Many Queenslanders face accessibility barriers when voting. In addition to telephone voting, the ECQ offers a range of services to ensure all eligible Queensland citizens have equitable opportunities to participate in public life as enshrined by the Human Rights Act 2019.

Disability access is a key consideration in the selection of election day polling booths and early voting centre venues and their locations.

In planning for the 2024 State general election, the ECQ reviewed early voting centre and election day polling booth locations to address issues identified and feedback received on specific polling places used at the local government elections.

Twenty election day venues used in the local government elections in March, which were unable to provide assisted or full access, were also replaced with more accessible venues.

The table below shows the breakdown of accessibility in polling places.

Accessibility	Early voting centres	Election day venues
Full	156	835
Assisted	52	316
No accessibility	2	17

Accessibility information relating to individual election day polling booth and early voting centre locations was published on the ECQ website. This included the first accessible HTML easy read guide (allowing for information to be delivered as an audio track) for voters with a disability. The easy read guide was a key resource of the disability stakeholder kit sent to Queensland's peak disability organisations.

To assist culturally and linguistically diverse electors, translation and interpreter services were available for people with English as a second language. In addition, a Multilingual Guide to Voting in 25 languages other than English was produced by the ECQ and distributed to all polling places, and posters in key languages (with a QR code to link directly to the guide).

At all elections, voters are able to request that a person, including election staff, join them in the polling booth if they need help to complete their ballot. This person can act as an interpreter, read and explain the ballot paper instructions, complete the ballot paper according to the voter's instructions and place the ballot paper in the ballot box.

For the 2024 State general election, the ECQ also delivered mobile polling to high-care residents of 451 aged care facilities. This service allowed residents at these locations to cast a ballot when ordinarily they would have difficulties attending a polling place.

Details of declared institution locations are at Appendix F.

Service centre

The ECQ service centre, provided in partnership with Smart Service Queensland, was operational prior to and throughout the election period to support voters, candidates and temporary election staff to access election services. The service centre responded to enquiries, feedback and simple complaints received via telephone.

Voters contacting the service centre received assistance in a range of areas including:

- responding to general enquiries and complaints received via email and telephone
- registration for telephone voting
- processing postal voting applications, and
- providing information about the range of voting services available depending on the individual circumstances.

New initiatives incorporated into the project for this election included earlier handover of the call centre from the ECQ to Smart Service Queensland to allow operators a longer lead in time prior to the election period to learn scripting and processes and increasing the queue capacity for inbound calls to mitigate the potential for unanswered calls.

Approximately 116,000 calls were answered between Monday, 2 September 2024 and Friday, 8 November 2024 with service capacity scaled up during the election period in response to customer service demand.

Throughout the same period, over 17,000 emails were received via the ECQ general email address, with responses provided covering all aspects of the election. This process was managed by a team at the ECQ head office.

Feedback and complaints

Members of the public are able to contact the ECQ to provide feedback or lodge a customer complaint about an ECQ service, action or decision.

The ECQ received 244 submissions in relation to service delivery for the 2024 State general election. Of those submissions, 147 were categorised as customer complaints or feedback, while 97 submissions related to matters outside the remit, jurisdiction or control of the ECQ.

Complaint categories

Voter services and experience	Postal voting	Voter information and communication	Performance of ECQ staff	Telephone voting	Out of scope
55	33	32	24	3	97

The ECQ responds to general complaints within 15 business days, and where practicable and appropriate, considers any improvements from the feedback received that can be implemented for future elections.

The ECQ provides comprehensive and contemporary information about its approach to receiving, managing, and responding to complaints through the ECQ website<sup>2</sup>. This includes information about:

- the ECQ’s complaints policy
- an information sheet about the complaints journey
- a breakdown of known categories of historical complaints to assist complainants with targeting their information to the right area of the ECQ
- agencies to whom complaints may be referred if appropriate, and
- year-by-year historical data to ensure there is transparency about the ECQ’s performance over time.

Election resources and technology

To support election delivery in Queensland, the ECQ procures, packs and distributes a significant volume of materials and equipment across Queensland. This supplies election field staff with the resources and equipment required to deliver election services locally, using centrally supported election systems managed by the ECQ.

Logistics and materials

Prior to the commencement of early voting, the ECQ packed and distributed voting screens and other election materials such as ballot boxes, signage, stationery, forms, envelopes and labels to serve all early voting and election day venues across Queensland.

Distributed materials

voting screens

72,688

pencils

ballot boxes

pallets

These materials were collated and packed by a team of staff in the ECQ's Brisbane warehouse in the months prior to the election. Over 1,000 pallets were then distributed across the state (up to 1800 kilometres away) to supply all Returning Officers' offices, early voting centres and election day polling booths.

Waste management

In providing electoral services, wherever possible the ECQ seeks to use paper and cardboard items comprising recycled content and to ensure that the paper and cardboard items are themselves recycled.

Standard cardboard items were used in voting centres included voting screens, accessible voting screens, ballot boxes, caution signs and recycle bins. Cardboard is often reused by schools and community groups before being recycled through their programs.

Ballot papers

For State general elections, electors are able to vote at any early voting centre or election day polling booth in Queensland regardless of where they are enrolled.

The preparation, printing and distribution of ballot papers requires significant planning, testing and quality assurance. Following the completion of the ballot paper order draw on Tuesday, 8 October 2024, proofing of ballot papers was completed that same evening to ensure the timely supply of ballot papers across Queensland.

The ECQ uses print on demand technology during early voting, meaning that each ballot paper is printed at the point of issuing a vote to an elector. This technology utilises blank ballot paper stock which was securely dispatched across the state to service the 210 early voting centres. Each ballot paper template for the 93 electorates must be checked to ensure it prints correctly on the blank ballot paper.

Pre-printed ballot paper stock is provided to Returning Officers as contingency for early voting and to service mobile polling and election day polling places. These ballot papers were dispatched between Tuesday, 8 October and Monday, 14 October 2024. During this period, it is critical that ballot papers are distributed as efficiently as possible to ensure remote areas receive the materials prior to the commencement of early voting.

Approximately 3.3 million blank ballot papers and 4.8 million printed ballot papers were distributed across all 93 electoral districts to ensure adequate stock was available. Ballot paper supplies were monitored against early voting turnout to ensure any additional supplies were identified and provided early.

At the conclusion of the election, any unused ballot papers were reconciled and returned to the ECQ warehouse where they will be held securely until they can be destroyed in line with the ECQ's retention and disposal requirements.

ICT equipment

For the 2024 State general election, each Returning Officer was provided a standard set of equipment, known as an 'office in a box'. This equipment is used by election staff to securely interact with the ECQ's election-specific systems and provide services to candidates and voters throughout the election period.

Office in a box fast facts
96 office in a box kits were configured and distributed across Queensland, consisting of:	2 desktop computers	2 24-inch computer monitors	1 multi-function printer
	2 smart phones	1 network solution (firewall/modem)	peripherals (i.e. spare toner, barcode scanner, keyboard, mouse and assorted cables)

In addition to their office-based equipment, Returning Officers were provided with laptops, known as ePollbooks, to provide elector look up and mark off capability for all election staff during the early voting period and on election day.

To enhance the voter experience from the March local government elections, the ECQ purchased over 4,000 additional laptops and associated equipment to allow for additional staff to mark off electors more efficiently.

The deployment of ePollbooks for the 2024 State general election consisted of:

- 9,228 laptops running the latest electoral roll lookup and mark off software application
- 9,228 2D barcode scanners allowing contactless scanning of Voter Information Cards and electronic Voter Information Cards, and
- 4,127 A4 printers for absent and declaration ballot paper printing.

The ECQ provided ICT monitoring and support services for the use of deployed technology by all frontline election staff and internal ECQ staff.

Critical election systems

The ECQ has three primary critical election systems, all fully owned and managed by the ECQ. These systems are:

- the Election Management System, which provides an integrated system for the majority of the ECQ's election delivery processes
- the Electronic Disclosure System, which enables real-time disclosure for candidates, agents, registered political parties, donors and other third parties, and
- the election results website, which publicly displays election results.

For this event, a new critical election system was created by separating functionality from the Election Management System to create a dedicated 'Find my polling booth' function. This provided a more responsive, reliable and maintainable system, better able to provide a high level of service in line with increasing public use.

In addition, the ECQ uses other supporting systems necessary for election delivery including learning management and payroll systems for temporary election staff.

The election results website publishes results entered into the Election Management System during the paper-based counting process. Election results are also published through a data feed available through a secure file transfer location for use by media or other authorised users for analysis and reporting on the election.

As part of the 2024 State general election preparations, multiple rehearsals of the results entry and publication process were conducted to ensure the readiness of business processes and supporting technology. Results rehearsals are an integral part of assurance activities in preparation for publication of election results.

In addition to rehearsals, other assurance activities were undertaken to ensure all systems were secure and comply with the ECQ's Information Security Policy Manual as per the Queensland Government's Information and cyber security policy (IS18) and International Organization for Standardization's Information security, cybersecurity and privacy protection — Information security management systems — Requirements (ISO/IEC 27001:2022).

These activities include increasing support and engagement with third party service providers, ensuring visibility of security monitoring activities, providing centralised security reporting, establishing a clear chain of command for incident response and conducting desktop assurance exercises conducted for testing and validating communication channels, capabilities and decision making.

Data, reporting and insight

The ECQ incorporated planning improvements that enabled it to monitor and review (in near real-time) voting trends against planning capacity, to inform any required changes to the service model during the early voting period.

Data and reporting delivered key insights and near real-time analytics that enhanced decision-making throughout the election process. This provided a deeper understanding of voter behaviour, enhanced prediction models for voter turnout and election outcomes, and near real-time reporting across all major election activities, including postal vote applications, early voting, and election day operations. The improved data monitoring and analysis capability enabled proactive issue identification and tracking of election progress.

For example, near real-time electorate-level voting data was used to gain insight into voter behaviour during the first week of early voting, enabling the ECQ to centrally review and refine its staffing model for each electorate throughout the second week of early voting. This ensured adequate allocation of vote issuing, queue control and count staff positions on election day and election night.

Furthermore, the data provided additional central visibility and assurance about the allocation of ballot papers at a local level. Monitoring evident trends of early ordinary votes, early absent votes, returned postal ballots and telephone votes, assisted with determining the likely size of counts at each venue. This supported Returning Officers to actively redistribute count staff to where they were needed most, to maximise the number of votes being counted on election night.

Post-election analysis allowed for an assessment of the project's effectiveness and voter engagement strategies, further strengthening ECQ's ability to refine future election processes. Several areas for improvement have been identified and recommendations to enhance future reporting, data management, and analytics capabilities have been captured to ensure a structured and informed approach to continuous improvement.

Election workforce

The ECQ's staffing establishment consists of around 100 staff located at the ECQ's head office in the Brisbane CBD and the ECQ's warehouse facility. During major elections, the ECQ rapidly increases its workforce to include thousands of temporary staff dispersed across Queensland.

As the second statewide event held in 2024, the ECQ utilised and expanded on an existing pool of skilled and experienced temporary election staff to deliver the State general election.

The ECQ also expanded training provided to frontline election staff to enhance consistency of service provision across voting channels and locations across Queensland.

Returning Officers

The election in each State electorate is managed by Returning Officers who are appointed by the ECQ through an open merit-based process.

For the 2024 State general election, the ECQ engaged 93 Returning Officers, approximately 77 per cent of whom had previous experience working as a Returning Officer at Queensland elections. This approach ensured operational continuity between elections and helped the ECQ to continue its investment in the training and recruitment of the Returning Officer workforce.

In the second half of 2024, all Returning Officers received four days of face-to-face training and supplementary online training. Support was also provided through targeted communications via telephone, email, handbooks and webinars.

Returning Officers deliver the following key duties:

- administering the Returning Officer's office, early voting centres and election day polling booths in their respective electorate
- recruiting and training temporary election staff
- distributing election materials
- overseeing and managing the operation of voting across their electorate
- engaging with candidates throughout the election period
- ensuring the conduct of the election complies with the ECQ's legislation, policies and procedures
- overseeing the counting procedures in strictly controlled environments, and
- packing and returning election materials to the ECQ warehouse.

To reduce reliance on fly-in or drive-in and out Returning Officers, the ECQ made targeted efforts to recruit locally in rural areas. This approach proved successful in many regions, but staffing remained a challenge in some remote locations.

The 93 Returning Officers were appointed for a period of approximately 10 weeks for the State general election. Each Returning Officer was based in an office located within the electorate, which housed all the resources required to deliver their local election. The Returning Officer's office was also used as an early voting centre in most electorates.

The ECQ will continue to develop its strategy, including through additional incentives and outreach, to attract, develop and retain its remote workforce.

Recruitment, training and support of temporary election staff

Temporary election staff are vital to ensuring the smooth administration of election facilities and services. Duties undertaken by temporary election staff are varied, and include the setup and dismantling of polling booths, issuing of ballot papers, marking voters' names off the electoral roll and counting ballot papers.

At a local level, Returning Officers are required to manage the election in each of Queensland's 93 electorates, including the recruitment of the temporary election staff required to carry out the duties to support election delivery.

The resource allocation methodology, including formulas used to allocate staff and materials at polling places, was updated ahead of the 2024 State general election. The minimum staffing requirements for polling places was also raised, with additional issuing officers appointed and queue controller duties carried out at early voting centres and election day polling booths that were expected to take more than 500 ballots. These planning improvements increased the projected total election workforce to around 15,000 positions from approximately 8,000 positions at the local government elections.

Targeted advertising and community engagement was also undertaken to increase the size of the applicant pool for temporary election staff positions. These recruitment efforts attracted more than 23,000 expressions of interest, an almost 73 per cent increase compared to the March 2024 local government elections.

Pre-employment screening

Pre-employment screening is completed for all ECQ staff to ensure its staff display integrity, professionalism and political neutrality, and criminal history checks are conducted when required. To ensure public confidence in the integrity of electoral events, all ECQ staff are required to certify that they have not and will not during their employment, engage in any political activity. Additionally, Returning Officers are required to undergo a criminal history check prior to being appointed.

Training

The ECQ produced a range of learning materials including online learning courses, videos, face-to-face training, and role-based handbooks to ensure temporary election staff were prepared for their role in the election. The training project team consisted of both training specialists and subject matter experts with operational backgrounds, to ensure that the training reflected real-world conditions. This approach proved successful, with 94 percent of temporary election staff expressing satisfaction with their online training.

Approximately 20,000 online training programs were completed, which includes instances where staff were assigned to more than one role and completed multiple training programs.

Election staff support

A team of eight office-based and two roving Contact Officers provided real-time support and instruction to Returning Officers and other election staff in the field. Contact Officers are the first point of contact particularly for Returning Officers, and provide advice and support prior to, during and after the election.

The Contact Officers were engaged from September to November 2024 and during that time the team received and responded to more than 9,400 requests for assistance.

Contact Officer enquiries
Temporary election staff, payroll and training	2,621

Contact Officers were supported by a team of ICT staff providing technical support and instruction when needed.

Temporary election staff workforce

A record of 15,740 temporary election staff were employed at the election, compared with approximately 7,300 employed at the local government elections.

Several roles were available for temporary election staff, with a range of responsibilities. Where practicable, some staff undertook duties across more than one type of role to build their election skills.

- Supervisors oversee staff at each polling place and ensure they comply with ECQ procedures. They have overall responsibility for the conduct of voting at the polling place and were also responsible for setting up and dismantling each polling place and for managing the unofficial vote count on election night.
- Senior issuing officers assist supervisors and issue declaration and ordinary votes to electors. They also supported the set up and dismantling of polling places.
- Issuing officers issue ordinary votes and undertake the unofficial vote count following the close of polls on election day.
- Election assistants undertake general administrative duties and support the operation of Returning Officers' offices.
- Count assistants assist with counting votes as well as dismantling polling booths.

10 Election workforce

While not used as a stand-alone role as was done for elections held during the COVID-19 pandemic, queue controlling duties were reinstated to manage the flow of foot traffic in and around polling locations.

During the six weeks of the 2024 State general election period, the ECQ employed 15,740 temporary election staff in 19,690 positions who worked a total of 252,900 hours.

The table below shows the breakdown of position categories and the number of staff and positions in each category.

Location	Number of staff	Number of positions
Returning Officer offices	1,431	3,599
Early voting centres	812	2,590
Election day venues	13,497	13,501

Temporary election staff can fill multiple positions over the election event, including pre-election, early voting, election day and post-election.

Workforce diversity and inclusion

The ECQ is dedicated to building a diverse and inclusive workforce, irrespective of gender, ethnicity, culture, linguistics, generation, sexual orientation or impairment.

The ECQ engaged 15,740 temporary election staff to work over the election period.

Of this number:

- 1,134 staff spoke a language other than English
- 361 staff identified as being of Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander background
- 14 staff identified as being South Sea Islander background, and
- 505 staff identified as living with a disability.

The Queensland public sector workforce profile (March 2023)<sup>3</sup> was used to set the diversity targets for the project's quality. The targets and outcomes are shown below.

Diversity group	Target	Outcome
Speak a language in addition to English (culturally and linguistically diverse)	7.49%	7.24%
Identify as having of Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander background	2.55%	4.74%
Identify as having a disability	3.40%	3.22%

Candidates and parties

Leading up to, during, and following the election, the ECQ consulted regularly with candidates and political parties to assist them to comply with their legislative obligations. A range of resources are published on the ECQ website, including handbooks, fact sheets and guides, to explain the nomination and disclosure requirements.

Engagement with candidates and registered political parties

The ECQ works closely with known candidates, registered political parties and third parties, as well as their staff and volunteers, to facilitate the nomination process and support compliance with legislative obligations.

A series of short videos relating to the 2024 State general election were recorded, published on the ECQ's website and YouTube, and distributed through the ECQ's network of election participants. The 26 videos, covering topics such as political donation caps, state campaign accounts, nominations, how-to-vote cards, and count procedures, have been well-utilised, reaching over 3,000 total views.

Additionally, a live webinar was held for 39 representatives from registered political parties and independent candidates following the release of the ECQ's Service Plan for the election, allowing for real-time questions to be asked.

Regular email communications were sent to all candidates and registered political parties throughout the election period to distribute important information or provide updates on emerging issues. This included providing advice on processes such as candidate nominations and the ballot draw, electoral roll products, voting services being provided by the ECQ, funding and disclosure regulations, as well as campaign volunteer and scrutineering requirements.

Political party officials also worked closely with ECQ staff regarding their obligations and the ECQ's expectations to assist in the effective administration of the election.

Candidate nominations

Following the issue of the writ on Tuesday, 1 October 2024, any eligible person was able to nominate as a candidate for election as a Member of the Queensland Parliament from Wednesday, 2 October 2024.

All prospective candidates, including those who had already made public their intention to run for election or had been endorsed by a registered political party prior to the issue of the writ, were required to formally nominate as a candidate prior to noon on Tuesday, 8 October 2024.

Once nominations closed, a ballot paper order draw was conducted in each electorate at 2.30pm. The Returning Officer, in the presence of witnesses, randomly drew the names of each of the nominated candidates for that electorate to determine the order in which the candidates' names were to appear on the ballot paper.

11 Candidates and parties

In total, 525 candidates nominated for the 2024 State general election, with each electorate having between four and ten candidates on the ballot paper.

Candidate gender breakdown

Of the 525 candidates, there were 487 endorsed candidates across nine registered political parties and 38 nominated as independent candidates. This is a decrease from the record high number of 597 nominations accepted for the 2020 State general election.

How-to-vote cards

Material which meets certain legislative definitions will constitute a how-to-vote card. The ECQ must approve all how-to-vote cards intended to be distributed by a political party or candidate before they can be distributed to voters on election day.

How-to-vote cards that were to be distributed on election day were required to be submitted to the ECQ for approval by 5.00pm on Friday, 18 October 2024 to ensure compliance with sections 182 and 183 of the Electoral Act.

To be approved for distribution, how-to-vote cards:

- must be authorised for the candidate or registered political party
- must state the name and address of the person eligible to authorise the card
- must be in the correct format, and
- cannot be likely to deceive or mislead voters about the ways of voting.

The ECQ approved 1,159 how-to-vote cards for candidates endorsed by a registered political party and a further 30 for independent candidates for the 2024 State general election.

This included instances where a single how-to-vote card required multiple approvals as it displayed voting instructions for multiple electorates.

In instances where how-to-vote cards were not initially approved by the ECQ, those submitting them were provided the opportunity to make any required amendments and resubmit them for approval. Advice on submitting compliant how-to-vote cards was published on the ECQ website and information regarding the approval process was regularly communicated to candidates and registered political parties.

The ECQ has powers to inspect or confiscate a how-to-vote card if it is reasonably suspected that an unapproved card is being distributed on election day.

Funding and disclosure requirements

The Electronic Disclosure System enables the real-time reporting of political gifts and loans and, allowing for greater transparency and public awareness of political funding and financial activity in Queensland.

Election participants are required to give financial disclosure returns to the ECQ within prescribed timeframes. The ECQ assists election participants to fulfill their obligations through both scheduled and targeted personalised communication approaches using email and SMS.

11 Candidates and parties

As at Tuesday, 13 May 2025, disclosure data indicates that electoral participants disclosed the following donations between Tuesday, 1 October to Saturday, 26 October 2024:

- registered political parties – $6.61 million in donations and loans (from 552 returns)
- candidates – $63,885 in donations and loans (from 28 returns)
- registered third parties – $1.53 million in donations (from 24 returns), and
- donors – $1 million in donations to candidates and registered political parties (from 265 returns).

Election compliance

During the election period, the ECQ's compliance activities were focused on the proper authorisation of election material, compliance with signage requirements at polling places, and increasing awareness of electoral laws in relation to these matters.

Efforts to increase stakeholder communication with political parties, candidates, and local authorities, and implement new methods of internal communication to Returning Officers helped streamline compliance actions. The ECQ also updated training materials and produced pre-recorded web seminars to assist Returning Officers in identifying common compliance issues more effectively.

All election material must be properly authorised with the name and street address of the author. During the 2024 State general election, the ECQ dealt with 55 notifications of potential non-compliance from all types of electoral participants. Of these:

- 41 matters were assessed as not breaching authorisation requirements
- one matter was found to be the fault of the publisher, not the electoral participant
- ten matters were rectified by the electoral participant upon being contacted by the ECQ and no further action was required
- two matters were finalised by issuing four penalty infringement notices, and
- two matters were unable to be resolved as the author of the election matter was unable to be identified.

Other matters which arose during the election event included four complaints about unlawful third-party campaign activity. Following investigation, three matters were determined to not be in breach of the Electoral Act, while the fourth matter resulted in the third party registering for the election before election day, which resolved the matter. Nine complaints were also received regarding poor candidate or party worker conduct, though insufficient detail was provided to justify further action, noting the ECQ's limited remit under the Electoral Act.

One matter of alleged bribery (offering a benefit on the understanding that the person's election conduct will be influenced) was also resolved during the election. In this case, a taxi driver promoted via social media that he would offer discounts for taxi fares to any person who would confirm they would vote for a particular candidate. The ECQ contacted the individual concerned who voluntarily removed the post immediately. The ECQ issued a warning letter, as there was no evidence available that any person actually took up the offer, or that any voter's behaviour changed because of the inducement.

Two matters involving misleading electors about the ways of voting were resolved during the voting period. One matter involved an elector posting content on social media in a foreign language, which misrepresented the way the compulsory preferential voting system worked and how an individual's vote would be counted. The individual concerned removed the content within a few hours of being contacted about the issue. A second matter involved the publication (on social media) of incorrect information about telephone voting eligibility. Again, the individual removed the information from their social media accounts.

11 Candidates and parties

During the early voting period and on election day, the ECQ handled 126 matters relating to the number, placement and size of signs at polling booths. These matters were escalated from Returning Officers or other election staff, or through complaints received by the ECQ. All were resolved voluntarily following educational intervention by either local election staff, or ECQ head office staff.

During the election, the ECQ actively monitored the activities of all electoral participants to ensure adherence to their legislative obligations. This included monitoring disclosures made in the Electronic Disclosure System for potential prohibited or anonymous donations, monitoring major media outlets for activities by third parties not registered with the ECQ, and acting upon information provided through the ECQ's complaints process. An area for legislative reform has been identified as a result of these monitoring activities, as the Electoral Act does not directly prohibit third party campaigners from accepting anonymous donations, as it does for registered political parties and candidates.

Injunctions and other matters

On election day, an application for an injunction was filed in the Supreme Court of Queensland by an endorsed candidate. The application sought orders that party volunteers be permitted to enter the grounds where a polling booth was located to hand out how-to-vote cards. The volunteers had been prohibited entry by the owner of the venue.

The ECQ responded to the application by submitting that it did not have the power under the Electoral Act or within the conditions of the lease signed with the venue owners to direct the venue owner to allow party volunteers entry to hand out how-to-vote cards.

The Court agreed with the ECQ's position but encouraged the candidate and the venue owner (under the coordination of the ECQ) to find a compromise. A compromise was reached, and the candidate withdrew its application.

The Court recommended that consideration be given to amending the Electoral Act to give persons handing out how-to-vote cards a legal right to do so, so the ECQ then had authority to regulate their distribution outside a polling booth, and any person with a complaint about a venue owner or the ECQ in that regard, could seek orders from a court to resolve the matter if necessary.

Communication

The ECQ developed a comprehensive strategic communication and awareness program for the State general election, including a statewide advertising campaign and multi-channel communication and engagement services to promote voter participation and support operational delivery.

To support service improvements from the March local government elections, the ECQ particularly promoted the availability of early voting options and their expanded operating hours, through advertising and direct elector communications, to better distribute electoral service demand across the voting period.

Examples of campaign, social media and other awareness-raising material materials are at Appendix G.

Advertising campaign

Advertising fast facts
68 million impressions	485,000 click throughs to website	8.5 million completed views on social media

For the 2024 State general election, the ECQ created two election campaigns. A hero or motivational advertising campaign, Vote on what counts to you, illustrated four scenarios to motivate electors to consider the importance of voting in the State election, linking state government responsibilities – disaster recovery, education, roads, recreational fishing and environment – to an elector’s particular interest. This campaign commenced on Tuesday, 1 October 2024, to coincide with the issue of the writ.

In addition to full length advertisements, three shorter informational advertisements were created to highlight extended early voting hours, the ability to vote anywhere in the state, and how to vote using the full preferential voting method.

A second campaign, the Stop and Consider – Election Facts, was produced to ask electors to think about misinformation and disinformation (especially from social media), evaluate it, and avoid spreading it further. This campaign commenced on Sunday, 15 September 2024, two-weeks prior to the main campaign, to coincide with increased electoral media coverage, increased campaigning and related misinformation and disinformation.

The campaigns were in market across the election period, concluding at midday on election day, airing on free-to-air and subscription television, radio and Spotify, print, billboards and Aboriginal Health TV, digital, social media, and Google search in urban, regional and remote parts of Queensland.

The post-campaign media report demonstrated the success of the campaigns, achieving a combined total of 68 million impressions, over 485,000 click throughs to the ECQ website from digital and social media advertising and Google search results, and 8.5 million completed views on social media.

Stakeholder kits

Twelve discrete stakeholder kits featuring advertising campaign materials were developed and distributed to almost 600 organisations – including those that support youth, seniors, disability, First Nations and culturally and linguistically diverse. The kits, which were also made available on the ECQ website, incorporated promotional collateral such as posters, social tiles and sample newsletter articles.

The ECQ also delivered campaigns to support the recruitment of temporary election staff for the election, which included the production of social media tiles, posters and videos. Geotargeted advertising was used to promote recruitment opportunities and boost temporary election staff numbers in areas where expressions of interest were insufficient to fill the number of positions required.

Media and social media

The ECQ’s media and social media functions delivered a significant volume of proactive content and responded to a high volume of reactive enquiries during and after the election period. Key messages included voting early, extended early voting hours, the ability to vote anywhere in the state, and increased election staff, all to assist electors with convenient and efficient voting.

To ensure the ECQ was media-ready for the election period, prepared media content and tools were developed to respond to an increase in media enquiries and request for media interviews. This approach ensured that the ECQ was able to respond quickly to enquiries and assign spokespersons to all requests for interviews.

A series of social media posts were delivered at key milestones during the election period. Prepared social media content to respond to enquiries supported social media moderation efficiency. This election also saw greater in-principle social media platform support in responding to misinformation and disinformation. Further engagement with the platforms will be undertaken prior to the next major election.

Post-election media analysis demonstrated a total advertising space rate of $4.38 million generated as a result of 36 broadcast interviews, 14 media releases and proactive media pitching which also contributed to an overall audience reach of 55.22 million. A total of 2,297 media reports were generated, with 42 per cent of these proactively generated, achieving a positive message penetration score of 80 per cent.

12 Advertising, engagement and communication

A high volume of reactive media activity was also delivered throughout and after the election period, with responses to 72 media enquiries provided during the election period.

The ECQ has an active presence on Facebook, X, LinkedIn and Instagram platforms and published a total of 93 organic posts during the elections. Overall, 3,892 comments or direct messages were posted via social media channels, with 504 of these receiving a response.

Multilingual Guide to Voting

The ECQ's Multilingual Guide to Voting supports electors from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds, new Australian citizens and people with low literacy to participate in elections (see Appendix G). The guide is made available online and at all polling places in Queensland and provides an overview of the voting process using easy-read principles for language, layout and design.

An updated version of the guide was prepared for the 2024 elections and included translations in 25 languages other than English and a poster to help alert electors to the availability of the resource inside polling booths. The poster includes a QR code to direct voters to an online version of the guide.

A total of 7,512 guides and posters were dispatched to polling places for the elections. Of those surveyed, 45 per cent said they were either satisfied or very satisfied with the guide.

Direct Communication

Direct communication fast facts

The ECQ sent every eligible elector a hard copy Voter Information Card (VIC) via mail, with electors who had an email address listed on the electoral roll also receiving an electronic version (see Appendix G).

The Voter Information Card provides direct communication from the ECQ to electors, alerting them that the elections were on and providing information about when, how and where they could vote. The card also features a unique barcode that enables voters to be efficiently marked off the roll when they present at a polling place.

Small design changes were made to both the Voter Information Card and the electronic version in response to learnings from the local government elections in March, including messaging to encourage electors to bring the Voter Information Card when voting to allow for faster mark-off and to better promote early voting options.

More than 3.62 million electors were mailed a hard copy card and a further 1.9 million received an electronic version of the card via email. Providing a digital alternative to the hard copy Voter Information Card helped ensure the ECQ's awareness program is continuing to evolve with public expectations.

Overall, usage rates of the cards are comparable to the March local government elections, with just over 60 per cent of Queenslanders opting to bring either of these products with them when they came to vote at the October State general election compared to 63 per cent in March.

SMS alert

At the March 2024 local government elections, the ECQ introduced an SMS alert on election day sent to eligible Queensland electors with a mobile number listed on the electoral roll.

Following the successful delivery of this alert, the ECQ repeated this service for the October State general election and introduced an early voting SMS to the suite of reminders. The direct elector communication at the commencement of the early voting period was aimed at better distributing electoral service demand across the voting period.

During the first week of early voting, an SMS was sent to over 2 million electors as a reminder that early voting was open. On election day an SMS was sent to more than 1.3 million electors who had not yet been marked off the electoral roll to remind them to vote by 6.00pm.

Website

The ECQ website provided essential election information to members of the public, the media, and other electoral participants. Prior to, during and after election day the website was continually updated to include the most up-to-date information on candidate nomination details, polling place locations and opening hours, and election results.

The ECQ also published numerous statutory notices on its website as required under the Electoral Act. This included:

- the writ
- elected candidate gazette notice
- Returning Officer offices list
- early voting locations
- election day polling places
- mobile polling locations, and
- remote area polling locations.

Statutory notices are available at Appendix E and F.

A suite of fact sheets for telephone voting, declared institutions, overseas electors, silent electors and the vote counting process were updated or developed.

In response to frequently asked questions during the local government elections in March, the 'How to Vote' section of the ECQ's website was reviewed and updated using plain language and modern web accessibility standards. The website structure was updated to allow for more graphics and an improved alert ribbon, and the CAPTCHA function was updated to be more accessible.

Aligning with web content updates, the ECQ developed an easy read guide, How to vote in Queensland at state elections. The guide was written in simple language to be widely understood by audiences with disability, culturally and linguistically diverse communities, and people with lower literacy. The guide was made available in accessible PDF, accessible HTML (including a high-quality audio version) and in print.

The website also provided functionality to enable voters to apply for postal votes online, for candidates to nominate online through a self-service portal, and for voters to use the 'Find my polling booth' functionality to search for their nearest polling place locations and operating hours.

Throughout the early voting period, and into the vote count, the ECQ used the website to publish daily election updates which highlighted key milestones and daily statistics on voting data.

12 Advertising, engagement and communication

For the 2024 State general election, the ECQ published daily election updates, and progressive election and voting data at an electorate level for:

- in-person voting
- postal votes issued, returned and accepted at scrutiny, and
- the progress of the vote count.

The published data provided a transparent account of the voting services being provided to Queensland electors and the level of usage of these services.

Across the election period, the website had more than 2.2 million page views, concentrated on content that was directly relevant to voters for the election.

Electoral integrity and disinformation

As Queensland's trusted elections provider, the ECQ takes electoral integrity extremely seriously. To counter misinformation and disinformation, the ECQ took a proactive approach to ensuring factual information about electoral processes was accessible to Queenslanders via the ECQ website and the ECQ's social media channels.

The Election Facts web page on the ECQ website created for the 2024 March local government elections was expanded ahead of the State general election. Offering a central point of truth on questions of electoral administration, it includes an Election Facts register which was updated progressively during election delivery to mitigate any misinformation or disinformation that arose in relation to the election.

The ECQ further supported electors to consider misinformation and disinformation through the Stop and Consider – Election Facts advertising campaign and new detailed animation video as detailed above.

Election results

The ECQ is required to undertake election counts in accordance with the provisions of the Electoral Act. The vote counting process commences as soon as possible following the close of polls at 6.00pm on election day in the presence of scrutineers. The official count commences on the Sunday after election day with declarations made as results are certain in the days following.

Scrutineers

A scrutineer is someone who is formally appointed by a candidate to observe certain aspects of the election process.

They must wear a scrutineer badge and bib at all times while carrying out scrutineering duties so they can easily be identified from ECQ staff.

Scrutineers are allowed to be present:

- anywhere people are voting
- for the sealing and unsealing of ballot boxes
- at the scrutiny of declaration envelopes
- anywhere electronically assisted voting procedures are taking place, and
- anywhere votes are being counted.

The ECQ welcomes scrutineers as their presence helps to ensure the election is fair and transparent. More information about scrutineers is available on the ECQ website<sup>4</sup>.

As part of the vote counting process, the ECQ must manage the secure transfer of absent votes cast by electors outside of their electoral district, back to their 'home' district. For this election, the exchange process required more than 500,000 absent votes to be transferred. Once received, these votes were counted and progressively added to the results for their electorate.

Vote counting and declaration process

After the close of voting at 6.00pm on election day, an unofficial preliminary count was conducted, in the presence of scrutineers, in polling places across the state, and at Returning Officer venues where most early votes were counted.

An indicative count, where preferences are allocated to the two candidates most likely to receive the highest number of first preferences, was also conducted in all electorates on election night. The indicative count provides an indication of how voters have distributed their preferences and the likely successful candidate. By the end of election night, over 2.4 million votes were counted and published to the website. In accordance with the Electoral Act, these preliminary results are not official and the ECQ does not declare results based on the outcome of these counts.

13 Election results

From Sunday, 27 October 2024, the official count commenced under the control of the Returning Officers after the conclusion of the preliminary count. Declarations of results for each electorate occurred progressively as the counting was finalised and results in individual electorates became mathematically certain.

Election results were progressively published on the ECQ results website as count data was entered by election staff and confirmed by Returning Officers and ECQ staff.

Queensland's voting system

State general elections are currently conducted under the full preferential voting system, meaning all formal ballot papers must show a first preference next to the name of one candidate and then must rank all other candidates in order of preference.

All first preferences are counted and, if no candidate receives more than 50 per cent of the votes, the candidate with the least number of votes is excluded and their second preference vote is distributed to the remaining candidates. This process is known as the full preference count or a distribution of preferences.

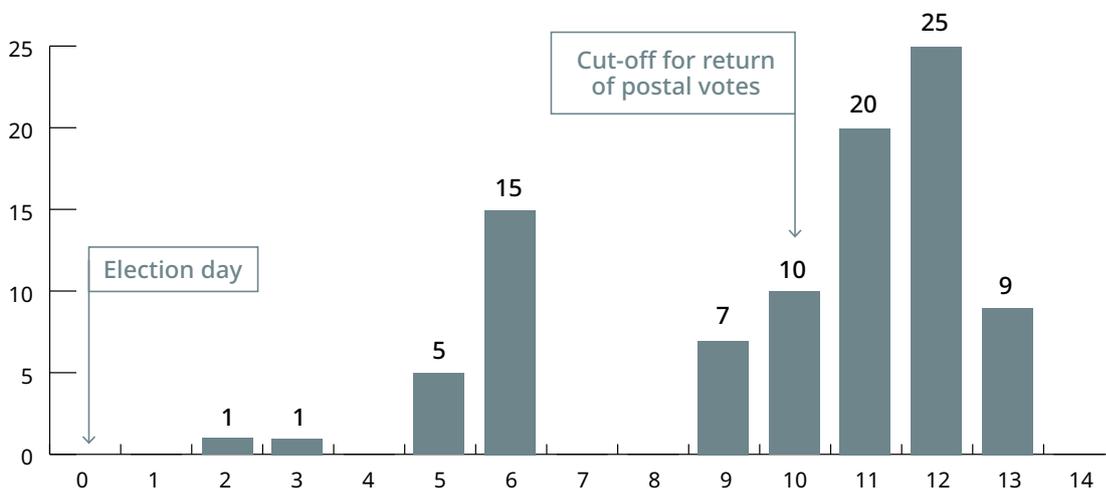

The distribution of preferences does not commence until the Returning Officer is assured that the number of outstanding votes will not affect the order in which candidates will be excluded, often after the deadline for return of postal votes. Once a candidate receives more than 50 per cent of the votes, they are declared the elected candidate. The outcome must be mathematically certain before a result can be officially declared.

The first successful candidate was declared on Monday, 28 October 2024 and the final electorates were declared on Friday, 8 November 2024 after counting a total of 3,232,148 votes.

As illustrated in the following graph, the majority of declarations (54) in the 2024 State general election did not occur until after the deadline for the return of postal votes on Tuesday, 5 November 2024. For most electorates, where a clear majority was not obtained on first preferences, a distribution of preferences was required before results could be declared.

As the preference distribution process requires the identification of the candidate with the fewest votes, in most cases it was not until after the deadline for the return of postal votes that the distribution of preferences could commence, and the successful candidate could be declared.

Number of declarations per day following 2024 State general election

13 Election results

One request for a recount was approved and conducted in the electoral district of Aspley in the presence of ECQ officials and scrutineers.

Once all electorates were declared, the writ was completed with the names of the 93 successful candidates who now constitute the 58th Parliament of Queensland, was returned by the Electoral Commissioner to Her Excellency the Governor of Queensland on the morning of Tuesday, 12 November 2024.

For a summary of first preference votes, see Appendix A for results by party, Appendix B for results in each electorate, or the ECQ website for detailed results.

Court of disputed returns

A candidate or an elector may dispute an election result by filing an application in the Supreme Court of Queensland sitting as the Court of Disputed Returns, up to seven days after the writ is returned.

For the 2024 State general election, no applications were made.

Post-election activities

After each statewide election in Queensland, the ECQ undertakes a broad range of post-election activities, including undertaking evaluations and surveys to drive improvements to electoral services and those aimed at fulfilling the ECQ's regulatory responsibilities.

This includes voter compliance programs, funding and disclosure compliance enforcement activities (including obtaining the election summary returns for the election), measuring the ECQ's performance in delivering the election and identifying areas of success and areas where business improvements can be incorporated into planning future elections.

Failure to vote and compliance

Voting in Queensland's State and local government elections is compulsory, making it an offence for an elector to fail to cast a vote without a valid and sufficient reason.

The ECQ seeks to make voting at elections as accessible as possible, through a wide range of voting options available including early voting, election day voting, postal voting, telephone voting, and mobile polling in high needs aged care facilities and remote locations. However, the ECQ also enforces the legal requirement to vote through post-election compliance programs aimed at changing non-voter behaviour.

The ECQ issued approximately 340,000 apparent failure to vote notices to electors who appeared to not have voted in the 2024 State general election. The notice required electors to advise if they had a valid reason for this apparent failure to vote or offered the option to settle the matter by paying half the penalty unit. Approximately 100,000 matters were resolved following the issue of the first notice.

On Tuesday, 13 May 2025, the ECQ issued a second notice to approximately 240,000 electors who did not respond to the first letter. The penalty infringement notice requires electors to either provide the ECQ with a valid reason for not voting, pay the full penalty unit, or have their matter heard in the Magistrates Court.

Electors will have four weeks to respond to the penalty infringement notice before the matter is referred to the State Penalties Enforcement Registry.

Multi-voters

The ECQ delivered a program to identify any voters who had potentially voted more than once in the election. The ECQ's mark off data indicated that 858 electors had potentially multi-voted, however 720 of these were determined to be human error during the mark off process (for example, marking off an elector on two devices at the same time, selecting the wrong elector due to same or similar name).

The ECQ contacted the remaining 138 electors to obtain further information and consider whether further enforcement action was required.

Following consideration of the responses received, the ECQ issued six warning letters to electors who admitted to voting twice. All voters claimed that their multi-voting was unintentional, with the most common reason being an unfamiliarity with the electoral system, or forgetting that they had voted earlier.

Election summary returns

All candidates, registered political parties, registered third parties and associated entities were required to submit an election summary return by Monday, 10 February 2025. Over 97 per cent of these participants lodged returns by the due date. As at Tuesday, 13 May 2025 nearly 99 per cent of these participants had complied, with only five candidates yet to comply.

The ECQ granted extensions to a number of candidates, one registered political party and one registered third party, due to the impact of the 2025 North Queensland floods in the week leading up to the due date. All entities which received an extension met their revised date.

The requirements for election summary returns differ depending on the type of participant, however all returns must include the electoral expenditure incurred for the election.

As at Tuesday, 13 May 2025 electoral participants had disclosed the following amounts of electoral expenditure incurred for the election:

- registered political parties – $18.69 million
- candidates – $9.21 million, and
- registered third parties – $8.11 million.

Publishers and broadcasters were also required to complete an election summary return by Monday, 23 December 2024. As part of their return, publishers and broadcasters were required to disclose details of all election-related advertisements they published or broadcast during the capped expenditure period (being Tuesday, 2 April 2024 to 6pm, Saturday, 26 October 2024). As at Tuesday, 13 May 2025 advertisements valued at $5.35 million were disclosed.

Election funding claims

Following the 2024 State general election, eligible registered political parties and candidates may seek election funding from the ECQ.

To be eligible to claim election funding, candidates must receive at least four per cent of the formal first preference vote polled in the election for the electoral district, while registered political parties became eligible if any of their candidates receive four per cent of the formal first preference vote.

Candidates and parties who are eligible for election funding are paid the lesser of:

- their maximum entitlement (calculated based on the number of first preference votes received), or
- the actual expenditure on their campaign.

For the 2024 State general election, an eligible candidate's maximum entitlement is each formal first preference vote received, multiplied by $3.333. A registered political party's maximum entitlement is each formal first preference vote received by their eligible endorsed candidates, multiplied by $6.665.

A claim for election funding must be lodged during the period of 20 weeks after the polling day for the election. In this case the deadline for claims to be submitted was Monday, 17 March 2025.

The maximum entitlement each registered political party, or candidate could claim for the election is shown in the following table.

2024 State election participant		Maximum entitlement
Animal Justice Party (Queensland)	Party	$9,410.98
	Candidates	$4,706.20

Preselection ballot audit

Under sections 171 and 172 of the Electoral Act, after the polling day for a state election, the ECQ must undertake a random audit of preselection ballots to identify whether the ballots were conducted in accordance with the model procedures (as outlined in Schedule 1 of the Electoral Regulation 2024, or the preceding Electoral Regulation 2013) and the relevant party's constitution.

The project is currently in the preparation phase and registered political parties have been notified of the outcomes of the ballot draw that determined which preselection ballots will be audited by the ECQ.

Once finalised, a report on the audit will be provided to the Minister for tabling in the Legislative Assembly.

Compliance activities

Prior to the election, the ECQ had developed its 2024-27 Compliance Plan. Under this plan, the ECQ is committed to performing compliance reviews and audits on election summary returns. This activity has commenced following the submission of election summary returns.

As at Tuesday, 13 May 2025, 211 reviews had been completed.

Performance review of Returning Officers

Following the election, the ECQ reviewed how it recruits, retains, and manages the performance of all Returning Officers, identifying which aspects worked successfully, as well as identifying areas of improvement.

In early 2025, a performance evaluation commenced for each Returning Officer who worked during the election. Conducted over three phases involving a performance self-assessment, peer evaluations undertaken by election staff and face-to-face discussions with ECQ staff, the evaluation covers five key Returning Officer competencies: advice, process, composure, leadership, and collective goals.

Key findings and recommendations will be used to guide how the ECQ prepares for future elections, focusing on how the ECQ onboards, trains, manages performance, off boards and engages with Returning Officers between election events to utilise their skills and knowledge to continually improve election preparations.

Election evaluation

Following all statewide elections, the ECQ engages a provider specialising in evaluation research to assess the extent to which the ECQ effectively delivered the election, highlighting key strengths and opportunities for improvement.

The scope of the review included a holistic performance evaluation to:

- review the ECQ's performance in planning and delivering the 2024 State general election
- assess the impact and efficacy of selected business improvements and strategies implemented by the ECQ since the March 2024 local government elections, and
- identify the ECQ's strengths and opportunities for improvement in delivering election services including identifying areas of focus for further operational review.

The review, conducted by Nous Group (Nous), employed a mixed-methods data collection approach that included stakeholder consultations and surveys, data analysis, and document and literature review.

Nous undertook a broad consultation program to inform the evaluation including interviews with ECQ staff and senior leaders, 26 Returning Officers, and three interjurisdictional electoral commissions.

The evaluation found that the ECQ effectively planned and prepared to deliver the election, and that key risks were suitably managed.

Nous made several recommendations for future improvements, including around earlier event planning and a clearer distinction in approaches to planning local government and state events; improved governance, business processes and use of data; a more strategic approach to workforce planning; and processes to build and retain organisational knowledge.

The ECQ also conducts an internal evaluation focused on operational matters and implementing lessons to be learned and embedded for future electoral cycles. The recommendations from the review will be considered as part of the internal evaluation process to inform business improvement and planning ahead of the 2028 election cycle.

Elector survey

Following the delivery of major election events, the ECQ undertakes a survey of electors to determine levels of voter satisfaction and identify opportunities for improvement in election delivery. The ECQ engaged market research provider Taverner Research Group to report on the findings from the survey.

An online survey was distributed to a selection of voters drawn from the electoral roll (with some pre-screening to ensure the diversity of the sample) supplemented by a telephone survey for low/non internet users. The online survey received 2,573 responses, with 302 telephone surveys completed.

The survey focused on awareness of the ECQ's functions, satisfaction with the election services provided, and perception of the ECQ's reputation. Key findings from the survey included:

- 88 per cent of electors were satisfied overall with the voting process, representing a significant increase from the 63 per cent reported following the 2024 local government elections, and a slight increase from the 87 per cent recorded following the 2020 State general election.
- 65 per cent of people who voted at a polling booth on election day reported they did not have to queue. Of those electors who reported needing to queue, the majority queued for ten minutes or less, with only ten per cent reporting that they queued for more than ten minutes.
- 53 per cent of respondents voted at an early voting centre, which aligns with the statewide early voting turnout. Electors cited it being more convenient to vote early (59 per cent) and avoiding queues on election day (45 per cent) as the main reasons for casting a vote before election day. 74 per cent of early voters reported that they did not need to queue at an early voting centre.
- 74 per cent of those who recalled seeing the ECQ's election awareness campaign advised they took action as a result. The main actions taken included noting the date of the election (31 per cent), voting in person (27 per cent) and numbering all boxes on a ballot (26 per cent). Television was the most prominent channel of recall at 58 per cent.
- 74 per cent of respondents agreed the ECQ delivers fair state elections.

Insights from the survey will inform the ECQ's post-election evaluation and identify service improvements ahead of future election events.

Audit

Internal Audit developed and executed an audit plan to undertake quality and risk assurance activities to assess and ensure that election activities in the field were undertaken in compliance with legislation and ECQ policy.

This work was contracted to an external firm who engaged field auditors to undertake independent assurance activities, attending 22 electorates during the early voting period, and election day and night. Returning Officer offices, early voting centres, election day venues and vote counting activities were observed. A report detailing observations and recommendations has been provided to management for consideration.

Informal ballot paper review

The rate of informal voting at elections provides insight into how electors understand and engage with the electoral system. For several years, the ECQ has conducted analysis of informal ballot papers following major elections, to monitor the extent of informal voting in Queensland and seek to identify any novel or continuing trends.

14 Post election activities

Electors participating in the 2024 State general election were required to use the full preferential voting system, casting a preference for every candidate on their ballot paper for their vote to be counted. Where electors did not complete their ballot paper as required to cast a formal vote, their ballot was informal.

While some electors cast informal votes intentionally, as a show of disinterest or in protest of a particular issue or view they hold, informal ballots may also be the result of a mistake or confusion, for instance where the elector uses the wrong voting system or makes a numbering error.

The review classified informal ballot papers from selected electorates into assumed 'intentional' and 'unintentional' informal categories, with the results to inform efforts being made to increase formal voting at future elections.

Methodology

There were approximately 126,000 informal ballot papers cast at the 2024 State general election. The ECQ reviewed approximately 86,500 of these ballots from a targeted sample of 63 electorates, which is just over two-thirds of Queensland's 93 electorates. The electorates were chosen based on the rate of informal voting and voter turnout, as well as ensuring a diverse mix of geographical locations around Queensland.

ECQ staff then categorised the informal ballots from each electorate into 28 categories. In undertaking the categorisation, staff made educated assumptions about the intention of the elector by reviewing the content on the ballot paper and determining where the ballot paper best fit against the 28 categories.

For reporting purposes, a high-level summary of the results is provided below. The 63 electorates have been separated into three groups based on having either high levels of informality (4.02 to 6.65 per cent), average informality (3.01 to 4.01 per cent), or low informality (1 to 3.00 per cent). More detailed results and a list of the 28 categories and their definitions are included at Appendix H.

Informality in Queensland

While informality has fluctuated slightly at recent elections, comparisons between the last three Queensland State elections and Federal House of Representatives elections, indicates that the rate of informality in full preferential voting elections remains fairly consistent as shown in the table below.

State election	Voting system	Informal (%)
2024 State general election	Full preferential voting	3.90
2020 State general election	Full preferential voting	3.40
2017 State general election	Full preferential voting	4.34
Federal election – Queensland statistics <sup>5</sup>	Voting system	Informal (%)
2022 Federal House of Representatives election	Full preferential voting	4.17
2019 Federal House of Representatives election	Full preferential voting	4.95
2016 Federal House of Representatives election	Full preferential voting	4.70

At the 2024 State general election, informality ranged significantly between Queensland’s 93 electoral districts, from 1.77 per cent in the Cooper electorate to 6.65 per cent in the Woodridge electorate.

The review found more than half (55.45 per cent) of informal ballot papers in the 2024 State general election were cast intentionally.

High informality electoral districts

The ECQ reviewed 32 electorates that were classified as having high levels of informality, with rates of 4.02 to 6.65 per cent. The categorisation of informal ballot papers from these elections identified the following information:

- Average voter turnout for the high informality electorates was 85.53 per cent, which is below the State average of 87.75 per cent.
- Nineteen of the 32 high informality electorates were located in southeast Queensland<sup>6</sup>.
- The combined results from the categorisation process across the 32 electoral districts found that an average of 54.34 per cent of informal ballots were intentionally cast, with 45.66 per cent assumed to be unintentionally informal.

<sup>6</sup> For the purposes of this report, southeast Queensland refers to Brisbane and its surrounds, including the Sunshine Coast and Gold Coast.

Assumed intentional

- The rate of assumed intentional informality in 23 of the electorates was more than 50 per cent of the informal ballot papers categorised.
- Six of the 32 electorates including Burnett, Cairns, Gladstone, Mirani, Morayfield and Nicklin had a higher rate of assumed intentional informality, with more than 60 per cent of informal ballots categorised into intentional categories.
- Approximately 19 per cent of assumed intentional informal ballot papers cast in the 32 high informality electorates were left blank. The next most common intentional informal category received approximately eight per cent and were categorised as 'Ticks, crosses or marks – deliberate'.

Assumed unintentional

- Nine of the 32 electorates including Bundamba, Burleigh, Currumbin, Inala, Mulgrave, Southport, Stretton, Waterford and Woodridge, had a higher rate of assumed unintentional informality, with more than 50 per cent of their informal ballot papers categorised as being unintentionally cast.
- The Stretton and Mulgrave electorates had the highest rates of unintentional informal voting, with 66.59 and 58.01 per cent respectively.
- Approximately 30.5 per cent of informal ballots in the 32 electorates appeared to use the wrong voting system and were captured in four categories (Numbers - just voted 1, Numbers – insufficient but more than 1, Numbers – 1 and other symbols and Ticks, crosses or marks – preferences 1 candidate).
- Numbering sequence errors and repetitions accounted for around 11 per cent of informal ballots in these electorates and was the next most common unintentional informal ballot.

Vote ON WHAT COUNTS TO YOU

Plan your vote
Important information to help you take part in the State Election on 26 October 2024.

Vote anywhere in Queensland
If you'll be away during the election, you still need to vote. If you're travelling in Queensland, you can vote early or on election day at any polling place in the State. Or, if you're away from Queensland, vote early before you go or apply for a postal vote.

Vote when it's convenient
It's not always easy to get to a polling booth to vote on election day. So why not vote early? Early voting centres open tomorrow and will remain open until election day from 8am until 6pm every weekday. Vote at any polling place, wherever you are in Queensland.

Number every box
In a state election, you're voting to elect your local Member of Parliament. You'll receive one ballot paper and you'll need to number every box, in the order of your preference. The top of your ballot paper has instructions to help you know what to do.

Remember your voter information card
Enrolled voters will receive a Voter Information Card in the mail. Bring your card along when you vote to get marked off the roll quicker.

Early voting starts tomorrow
