CHILDRENS COURT OF QUEENSLAND REPORT

President's Overview

- [1] The Making Queensland Safer Act 2024 enacted by parliament on 13 December 2024 introduced a number of significant changes to the Youth Justice Act 1992. These changes included: a new section, s175A, added to the Act increasing the maximum penalties for particular offences to bring them into line with adult maximum penalties; providing that any minimum term of imprisonment provided for those offences applied to the incarceration of a child, including mandatory life imprisonment for murder: increasing the jurisdiction of the Children's Court Magistrates to probation for a maximum of three years and detention for a maximum of three years; mandating that the court must not have regard to any principle that detention should only be imposed as a last resort or any principle that a sentence allows the child to stay in the community is preferable; and providing that the court when imposing sentence must have primary regard to any impact of the offence on a victim. Further offences were added to the list of s175A offences on 23 May 2025.
- [2] Tables 1 and 2 of this report show the finalised charges dealt with under s175A of the Act. Since its introduction, the courts have dealt with 2,535 matters, primarily burglary and theft offences, in the period to 30 June 2025. There were 49 robbery offences, 2 harm or endanger person offences and 128 assault offences. The small number of robbery offences and harm or endanger person offences reflect the fact that very few of these matters had proceeded to a hearing in the Childrens Court of Queensland by 30 June 2025. Almost all the matters in Table 1 were heard in the Magistrates (Childrens) Court. Of the penalties imposed for those offences, 12.5 percent of convictions resulted in sentences of detention and 9.4 percent in conditional release orders. Orders of probation accounted for 40.9 percent of sentence orders.
- [3] At this stage it is not possible to assess whether the legislation has produced a reduction of finalised charges before the court. A comparison of finalised charges for offences that are now listed in s175A of the Act for the period from July to December 2023 against the period from July to December 2024 show a reduction from 9,721 to 8,158. This reduction occurred before the legislation took effect. Similarly, a comparison between the periods January to June 2024 and January to June 2025 show a reduction from 8,394 to 6,612<sup>1</sup>. Those figures show a reduction in the number of finalised charges, however, the majority of the offences were committed before the introduction of s175A of the Act. The total number of charges finalised under the new legislation represent 2,535 offences out of a total of 6,612 finalised appearances from January to June 2025.

Victims of Offenders

- [4] It is also too early, on annual figures, to determine whether the new legislation has made a difference to the numbers of victims of youth offenders. Data extracted from the Queensland Police Service administrative data shows that in 2024-25 there was a total of 4,717 reports of personal offences where at least one offender was aged between 10 and 17 years. In the previous year, there was a total of 5,575 recorded victims of personal offences where at least one offender was aged 10 to 17 years.<sup>2</sup> This is not unexpected given the drop in offences generally. In 2023-24, acts intended to cause injury (which included assault and other acts intended to cause injury) was the most predominant offence among victims constituting 3,793 victims or 68 percent of all personal offences involving youthful offenders. Assault was the predominant offence amongst victims in 2024-25 constituting 3,500 victims or 74.2 percent of all personal offences involving youthful offenders.
- [5] The second most prevalent offence in 2024-25 was robbery, blackmail and extortion at 12.8 percent or 604 victims. This can be compared to 2023-24 where the figures showed 911 victims or 16.3 percent. There were fewer victims of sexual offences this year as they made up 353 of all victims or 7.5 percent. This is a reduction from 476 victims the previous year. The inclusion of some sexual offences in s175A did not occur until 23 May 2025.

- [6] The predominant group of victims in 2024-25 were females aged 10 to 14 for assaults, males 10 to 14 for robberies, and females 10 to 14 for sexual offences.<sup>3</sup>

Numbers of offenders

- [7] Overall, there were a total of 6,381 finalised appearances of child defendants in Queensland courts this year compared with 7,325 the previous year. This represents a decrease of 12.9 percent and was most apparent in the Magistrates (Childrens) Court where numbers decreased by 13.5 percent.<sup>4</sup> This is consistent with the slight downward trend in numbers shown over a 10-year period<sup>5</sup>. The decrease in finalised charges is reflected in a decrease in distinct young people who had a proven charge finalised in Queensland courts last year. There was a decrease from 3,283 to 2,980, a drop of 9.2 percent. This can be seen as a continuing downward trend that has been present since 2021-22<sup>6</sup>. Young boys make up most offenders at 72 percent<sup>7</sup>. This figure has been consistent since 2020-21.
- [8] The number of children who come before the Childrens Court should be viewed against the general population of children in Queensland. In 2024 there were 577,462 children aged between 10-17 in Queensland. Of that number, 0.6 percent have a proven offence and 43 percent of those children never return to the youth justice system. The offender profile of the children who do appear before the court shows that they have complex needs. 81 percent of these children have used at least one substance and of those in custody 38 percent have used methamphetamine. Close to half of young offenders have experienced or been impacted by domestic violence, have a mental health or behavioural disorder, are disengaged from education, and/or have a disability. A quarter of these children have at least one parent in custody and a third have unstable or unsuitable accommodation.<sup>8</sup>

- [9] While many of the children who appear in the courts will be only ever appear in court once, or respond to community support through conditional bail programs, restorative justice or probation orders, there remains a persistent core of young people who offend frequently and, often due to significant mental health and life challenges, are not prepared to, or not able to, take advantage of the rehabilitation offered to them. They are the young people who are identified as serious repeat offenders. The statistics in relation to this cohort of offenders remains stubbornly consistent. There has been a slight reduction in the proportion of this group, however, they remain responsible for a disproportionate amount of the harm caused in the community. In 2023-24 19 percent of offenders were responsible for 51.6 percent of proven offences. In 2024-25 18 percent of offenders were responsible for 47.9 percent of proven offences.<sup>9</sup>

Services

- [10] Given the complexity of some of the cohort who appear in the Childrens Court, the support services offered to them when they appear in court and after, are vital. The Griffith Youth Forensic service offers a vital service to the court in relation to children convicted of sexual offences. They provide a comprehensive pre-sentence report to assist the court in arriving at an appropriate sentence. The reports consider all of the complexities that are personal to the child and then provide assistance on appropriate treatment and likely recidivism. The service then offers treatment for the child as part of the sentencing process. A recent evaluation of the service found that after treatment sexual recidivism was reduced by 78-90 percent and overall recidivism was reduced by 34-44 percent.
- [11] The Child Youth Mental Health Service offers a triage service in the Magistrates (Childrens) Court and referrals for the child to services where needed. It also treats children in detention and in the community. Similarly, the Education Department operates to assist children when they arrive at the Magistrates (Childrens) Court to access education or training that may suit their circumstances. They are both important services offered at a time when a young person first appears in court.

- [12] Legal Aid (Queensland) offers free legal assistance to all children. The Youth Legal Aid team continues to operate the youth legal advice hotline as well as training and accreditation services for solicitors in private practice. Legal Aid also maintains on its website extensive material to assist practitioners when representing young people.

Youth detention

- [13] The issue of children being locked in their cells for days at a time has been raised on many occasions in sentence proceedings in this court particularly in sentence proceedings occurring in the Cairns and Townsville Childrens Courts.
- [14] Of the three detention centres in the State, the Cleveland Youth Detention Centre is the only detention centre in North Queensland, and it houses a predominantly Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cohort from all over North Queensland. These children are often dislocated from their communities and their families and therefore care for these vulnerable children whilst in the care of the State is important. The latest report on the three Queensland Youth Detention Centres by the Inspector of Detention Services outlines some of the problems experienced by children in youth detention centres. That report found that there were extended separations due to staff shortages at Cleveland Youth Detention Centre although the frequency is reducing. Staff shortages separations also occurred in Brisbane Youth Detention Centre on weekends. It was also found that high frequency suicide risk observations were not conducted as required.
- [15] In the Cleveland Youth Detention Centre it was determined that children there were subject to staff shortage separations of two hours or more for an average of 53 per cent of their time in custody. In June and July of 2024 the children at the Cleveland Youth Detention were subjected to extended staff shortage separations of 11 hours and 59 minutes or longer for 61 per cent of the time, and on five occasions children were subjected to staff shortage separations for six consecutive days. When a child is subject to staff shortage separations of 11 hours and 59 minutes that combines with their daily overnight lockdown of 7:00 pm to 7:00 am resulting in separation in a cell for 24 hours per day. The report concluded there was a serious risk to the safety, care and wellbeing of children in Cleveland Youth Detention Centre due to staff shortages.<sup>10</sup>

- [16] The report also noted that staffing levels have improved since that June and July period, however, there are still many days when children are experiencing full days locked away due to staff shortages.
- [17] The number of young people in youth detention were relatively stable from the previous year,<sup>11</sup> with young males dominating the numbers.<sup>12</sup> As already noted, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people continue to be significantly overrepresented in the population of children in youth detention. The number of young people in youth detention that were unsentenced increased to 252 from 246 and those sentenced in detention decreased from 40 to 33.<sup>13</sup> On average the length of time a person spent in youth detention unsentenced was 54 days which represents an increase of six days from the previous year and an increase from 39 days to 54 over the last four years.<sup>14</sup>
- [18] The fact that children spend significant periods of time in detention unsentenced results in children being released into the community unsupervised at times. In 2024-25 46.1 per cent of all finalised appearances in which a detention order was made resulted in a young offender being released from court following sentence. In 26 per cent of all appearances resulting in a detention order the offender was not required to serve a supervised release order.<sup>15</sup>
- [19] There are still many children spending time in watchhouses.<sup>16</sup> During the last year there were 6,815 admissions to watchhouses. Of those admissions 59 children spent 15 or more days in a watchhouse, 216 spent eight to 14 days in a watchhouse and 287 spent five to seven days in a watchhouse.<sup>17</sup> Time spent by a child in a watchhouse is detrimental to the mental and physical health of the child; the police in charge of watchhouses are not equipped to properly look after the children, the children are placed in close proximity to adults, and there are very limited facilities and access to nutritious food, education or exercise.

Youth justice trends summary

- [20] As already noted, the number of finalised appearances reduced over the year by 12.9 percent and distinct defendants reduced by 9.2 percent from the previous year.<sup>18</sup> Despite the decrease conviction rates remain steady at 67.3 percent compared with 67.5 the previous year. Finalised appearances reduced from 6,743 in the Magistrates Court to 5,831, 555 in the Childrens Court of Queensland to 534, 7 in the District Court to 2 and 20 in the Supreme Court to 14.<sup>19</sup>
- [21] Despite there being a significant reduction in 17-year-olds being convicted in 2024-25 from 840 the year before to 750, 17-year-olds still account for 25 percent of all child defendants convicted of a charge while 16-year-olds account for 22 percent.<sup>20</sup> It should be noted that numbers in all age groups, with the exception of 11-year-olds, have decreased from 2021 to 2025.
- [22] There has been little change in numbers of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people represented in the cohort of young offenders. In 2024-25, they accounted for 55 percent of all distinct young people with a proven charge which is consistent with the previous year.<sup>21</sup> Of the 72 percent of all males with a proven charge in 2024-25, 38 percent of those males were Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and of the remaining 27 percent of females, 16 percent were Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander.<sup>22</sup>
- [23] Similarly to previous years, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Island young people are disproportionately represented in the younger age groups of young offenders and in particular with 83 percent of 10–11-year-olds, 72 percent of 12-year-olds and 63 percent of 13-year-olds convicted being indigenous. That percentage drops to 44 percent by the time a young person is 17 years of age. An Aboriginal and Torres Strait Island young person is 12.5 times as likely as other young people to have proven charges finalised in a Queensland Court. However, the total conviction rate per 1,000 Queensland population has decreased slightly since 2021-22 from 34.9 to 31.9.<sup>23</sup>

- [24] In terms of orders imposed of 1,916 young people referred to restorative justice process, 44 percent of those children were Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander (a decrease from the previous year of 47 percent) and they accounted 65 percent of all distinct young offenders commencing a supervised Youth Justice order (a decrease of 2 percent from the previous year).<sup>24</sup> Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people were 18.9 times as likely as other young people to commence a supervised Youth Justice order in 2024-25.<sup>25</sup>
- [25] Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people continue to dominate the numbers of young people in youth detention and accounted for between 66 and 72 percent of young people in youth detention on an average day over the last four years.<sup>26</sup> In 2024-25, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people accounted for 72 percent of young people in youth detention on an average day. This is a one percent increase compared to previous years.<sup>27</sup> Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people were 26 times as likely as other young people to have been in youth detention in 2024-25. This is the highest rate in the last four years.<sup>28</sup>
- [26] The number of charges finalised against child defendants dropped from 49,670 to 44,056. Breaches of violence orders also decreased from 393 to 271. However, there was a significant increase in breaches of bail rising from 6,704 to 7,459.<sup>29</sup> The 10-year comparison of finalised charges against child defendants shows a steady increase from 2015 to 2025 although it should be noted that much of the increase from 2022-23 and onwards includes breaches of bail offences which accounted for a fifth of convicted charges against children in 2024-25.<sup>30</sup>

- [27] During the year, 82 percent of child defendants were convicted by courts in Queensland with detention being the most serious penalty imposed in 8.7 percent of cases and a further 6.2 percent resulting in a conditional release order. Probation was the most common penalty imposed<sup>31</sup>. There was a decline in cautions administered this year with 14 percent fewer than the previous year although cautions still remain approximately 28 percent of all police actions taken against youth offenders primarily in relation to theft.<sup>32</sup> Restorative justice processes also saw a drop of 14 percent from the previous year, with theft again being the most common offence type conferenced.<sup>33</sup>
- [28] The Childrens Court of Queensland finalised 2,527 charges and 534 appearances last year. Approximately 68 percent of those appearances related to defendants aged 16 and over. There was an increase in the numbers of 15 and 13-year-old defendants from the previous year.<sup>34</sup>
- [29] In terms of charges finalised, assaults increased by 85 charges in 2024-25, burglary by 51 charges and theft by 41 charges. However, robbery decreased by 128 charges, sexual offences by 75 charges, and drug offences by 53 charges<sup>35</sup>. There was a conviction rate of 83.3 per cent with 21.3 percent of defendants receiving a custodial sentence and a further 12.1 percent a conditional release order. Probation remains the most common penalty.<sup>36</sup>
- [30] Turning to other work of the Court, applications for sentence reviews dropped from 46 to 39 last year. This represents the lowest number of sentence reviews since 2021.<sup>37</sup> Applications for bail also reduced significantly from 162 to 96. Again, this represents the lowest number since 2021.<sup>38</sup> Appeals lodged pursuant to s 222 of the Justices Act reduced from 10 to one.<sup>39</sup> Child protection appeals however increased from 15 to 45 which is the highest number of appeals since 2021<sup>40</sup>. Applications for parentage orders decreased from 30 to 20.<sup>41</sup>

- [31] In the Magistrates (Childrens) Court there were 5,831 finalised appearances with a further 472 committals to a higher court for trial or sentence. This represents a decrease of 13.5 percent from the previous year. Where there was an adjudicated outcome, there was a conviction rate of 80.6 per cent which is similar to the previous year.<sup>42</sup> 67 percent of finalised appearances were accounted for by children aged 15 to 17 years of age.<sup>43</sup>
- [32] In total there were 41,453 charges finalised against child defendants which represents a decrease of 5,500 compared with the previous year. Theft accounted for 29.8 percent of all charges which also represented a decrease of 18 percent compared with the previous year. Offences against justice procedures and orders accounted for 23.7 percent of all charges finalised (an increase of 5.6 percent).<sup>44</sup> In terms of penalty, a reprimand was the most serious penalty imposed in 34.8 percent of cases followed by probation in 30.3 percent. A custodial sentence was imposed in 7.1 percent of cases and a conditional release order in 5.5 percent of cases.<sup>45</sup>
- [33] The other work of the Court showed a decrease in applications of domestic violence protection orders from 398 to 350<sup>46</sup> but a significant increase in child protection applications rising from 6,626 the previous year to 8,123 and a steady increase over the last four years from 5,870 to 8,123 in 2024-25.<sup>47</sup>
- [34] The Supreme and District Courts do not deal with a large number of young offenders. In 2024-25 there were 16 finalised appearances of children which was

11 fewer than the previous year. All of those children were 17 and over.<sup>48</sup> The most common offences were homicide and sexual assault with associated theft and drug offences. There was a 56.3 percent conviction rate.<sup>49</sup>

[35] A total of 1,563 young people commenced a supervised youth justice order in 2024-25.<sup>50</sup> Of those the majority of young people commencing those orders were male<sup>51</sup> and the majority of those supervised youth justice orders were probation orders.<sup>52</sup> Conditional bail programs decreased from the previous year.<sup>53</sup> The majority of community based supervised orders that commenced in 2023-24 were successfully completed by 2024-25 (87 percent probation orders, 68 percent of restorative justice orders and 63 percent of community service orders being the most prevalent community based order types). Approximately 50 percent of all conditional release orders were the subject of breach action before the successful or unsuccessful completion of the order.<sup>54</sup>

[36] The time taken to finalise proceedings in the Magistrates (Childrens) Court was 112 days. This is an increase from 85 days in the previous year. In the Childrens Court of Queensland the time taken to finalise proceedings reduced from 309 days to 291 days.<sup>55</sup>

Childrens Court Committee

[37] The Childrens Court Committee continues to meet during the year. It remains a way for the agencies connected to the courts to exchange information and to discuss emerging issues in youth justice throughout the State. It facilitates dialogue and allows for quicker action and understanding of potential problems and current challenges. It also allows for timely dissemination of new programs and procedures, The committee provides an important avenue for communication and remains a vital cross-agency initiative. Special thanks to Kirryn Lewis who acts a secretary for this committee.

Court Case Management Committee

- [38] The Court Case Management Committee meets as required and discusses issues arising in the child protection arena. This Committee does not meet as frequently as the Childrens Court Committee. It meets on an as needed basis.

Acknowledgement and thanks

- [39] This report demonstrates that much of the daily business of the Childrens Court is carried out by the magistrates across the State. Specialist Childrens Court Magistrates deal not only with youth justice matters but also the increasingly heavy workload of the child protection jurisdiction. That work is particularly stressful, and it is noted that there is currently a Child Safety Commission of Inquiry examining how to better manage the system. The increasing numbers of child protection applications place enormous pressure on magistrates dealing with those matters. The paperwork is voluminous, parties are often unrepresented and extremely stressed and the decisions are life altering. In relation to youth justice sentencing the magistrates deal with a high volume of matters, sometimes trivial, but often very serious. They deserve thanks and appreciation. The magistrates are continued to be led with efficiency by Chief Magistrate Brassington.
- [40] I also thank the judges of the Childrens Court of Queensland for their assistance in managing the workload of that Court. The State is large and diverse and therefore most of the judges of the District Court take on the mantle of Childrens Court judges at times.
- [41] I also acknowledge the professionals that work in Youth Justice including the work of the agencies that support the Childrens Court and the youth justice system generally. The solicitors and barristers who appear regularly in the Court are professional and dedicated to their clients particularly those involved in Youth Legal Aid, the Youth Advocacy Centre, the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Legal Service and the duty lawyers who attend the Magistrate (Childrens) Court providing general assistance to children at the first appearances before the Court. The police prosecutors and the Queensland Director of Public Prosecutions officers as well as the Court Liaison Officers of the Department of Youth Justice and Victim Support and the child safety officers who attend court also play an essential role in the running of the court and their contribution is appreciated.

- [42] I also acknowledge the officers of the Department of Youth Justice and Victim Support generally, the Registry of the Magistrates (Childrens) Court and the Childrens Court of Queensland, the Director of Child Protection Litigation and his staff, officers of the Department of Justice, officers of the Office of the Adult Guardian and the police who all contribute to ensure the efficient running of the courts as well as doing their best to ensure that children are managed within the system.
- [43] Special mention must go to Claire Slater and Kylie Chaczko who provide enormous support to the court through their statistical expertise and technical support.
- [44] Many thanks to the officers of the Court's reporting unit and the Queensland Government's Statisticians Office for their assistance in providing the statistics for this report.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

The statistics presented in this report may vary from data published elsewhere, due to differences in the dates administrative data were extracted, and frequency of revision, or in counting rules or statistical standards applied. Changes in the scope of the court statistics also occur from time to time. Readers are therefore urged to exercise caution when making comparisons between publications.

Reference year The statistics in this report relate primarily to the 2024–25 financial year, i.e. 1 July 2024 to 30 June 2025. Where possible, data from up to nine previous financial years are provided for comparison.

Data sources Data which form the basis of the statistics presented in this report have been collated by Queensland Government Statistician’s Office (QGSO), Queensland Treasury. As all data are current at time of extraction, historical data include revisions.

Finalised appearances and charges data have been sourced from QGSO’s Courts Database, which contains operational data sourced from and managed on behalf of the Department of Justice. Data were extracted in September 2025.

Sourced from the Queensland Police Service were data relating to cautions administered to youth offenders, and victims of child offenders, extracted in July, and data relating to young people held in custody in police watchhouses and police stations, extracted in August 2025.

Youth justice data, including distinct defendants, rates, restorative justice conferencing, and supervised youth justice orders were provided by the Department of Youth Justice and Victim Support. Data were extracted in September 2025.

Other data were sourced from the Department of Justice for use in this report, and were extracted in August 2025.

Counting rules The Childrens Court of Queensland Annual Report uses counting rules based on those used by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) for presenting courts statistics. In contrast, the Magistrates Court Annual Report uses Report on Government Services (RoGS) counting rules as prescribed by the Australian Government Productivity Commission. The differences in the counting rules make these two reports incomparable. The main difference is the counting unit used for RoGS and the Magistrates Court Annual Report is lodgements, which gives a measure of workload, whereas the unit counted by the ABS is finalised appearances, which gives a measure of results.

Further information regarding these counting rules is available from the following websites:

Supreme Court of Queensland

the highest court in the Queensland judicial system (with unlimited jurisdiction and dealing with murder, attempted murder, manslaughter and the most serious drug offences).

trial (criminal)

a hearing (in a District or Supreme Court) before a judge sitting with a jury or (in the Childrens Court of Queensland) by a judge alone to determine the guilt of a defendant charged with an offence.

Interpreting the data

breach of youth justice order

An offender found to have breached the conditions of a youth justice order (i.e. conditional release, probation, community service and good behaviour order) will appear in court for re-sentencing for the offence for which the order was originally made (Youth Justice Act). Therefore, as such breaches are not criminal offences, offenders appearing for re-sentencing have been excluded from the data in this report.

Breaches of justice orders which are criminal offences (for example those related to escaping custody, breach of bail, or breach of domestic violence order) have been included in the court statistics.

In 2024–25, there were 142 appearances by child defendants in Queensland courts for breaches of youth justice orders compared with 6,381 for criminal offences.

On a crime report, a caution is counted once only for each type of offence committed by an offender. Thus, if a person is cautioned by police for three property damage offences, only one caution will be counted for that offence type, and if a person is cautioned for one burglary offence and one property damage offence, two cautions will be counted, one for each offence type. The total number of cautions recorded may be less than the total number of offences for which offenders were cautioned.

classification of offences	This report shows the classification of charges by “offence type”. The offence classification used is the Australian and New Zealand Standard Offence Classification (ANZSOC), 2023.<sup>56</sup> Offences are first classified into one of seventeen divisions of ANZSOC, and further broken down into offence types. Then the National Offence Index (2024) is applied to establish an order of seriousness to determine the most serious offence, where applicable. Detailed tables contain figures for all offence types. Summary tables in the body of the text give figures for all categories at the higher level (division) and those at the lower level that are of particular interest.
finalised appearance versus distinct defendant	In this report, the Queensland Courts and Youth Justice use different terms to explain volume counts. With Courts data, except in the case of finalised charges, the counting unit is appearances finalised by adjudication. An individual defendant may have one or multiple finalised court appearances during the reference year, and each is counted. By comparison, each distinct child defendant with a finalised appearance is counted by Youth Justice only once per reference year, regardless of how many finalised appearances they had during that time.
imprisonment	As a general rule, there is no power of imprisonment (as opposed to detention) under the Youth Justice Act. In rare cases, however, imprisonment may be imposed. For example, if a person commits a crime as a child, absconds, and is arrested pursuant to warrant one year or more after becoming an adult, the court must deal with the offender as an adult and can impose a penalty of imprisonment (see Youth Justice Act).
most serious penalty	Offenders may receive more than one type of penalty in a single disposition. Tables in this report show only their most serious penalty. For example, a person ordered to be detained in custody and also given a probation order is counted under “Detention” only, because it is the more serious penalty.
percentage totals	In tables in this report, constituent percentages may not sum to exactly 100% due to rounding.
recording of age	Where possible, age has been calculated from the date of birth to the date of offence, or the date of finalised appearance, whichever is applicable.
Serious Repeat Offender Index (SROI)	The SROI is a 'point in time' measurement that represents the volume/seriousness of a young person's recent offending behaviour. The SROI provides a score as at a particular

measurement date for all young people who, as at the relevant measurement date:

- were alleged to have committed an offence in the previous 12 months that was subsequently referred to a restorative justice process by Queensland Police or heard in a Queensland court, and
- were aged 10–17 years, and
- were not deceased, and
- had either a proven offence or a referral to a restorative justice process in their lifetime, or one or more adjourned charges still waiting finalisation in court.

SROI scores take into account the young person's age at that measurement date, as well as the young person's offending (including seriousness, frequency, clustering and recency) and custody nights over the 24 months leading up to that measurement date. Higher index scores indicate more serious/frequent offending behaviour. Young people with scores of 6 or above are considered a 'Serious Repeat Offender' (as at that measurement date).

SUMMARY

Finalised matters are presented in this report by their method of finalisation. That is, whether or not a matter has been adjudicated – where the court has handed down a judgment as to whether the defendant is guilty (convicted) or not guilty (not convicted) of a criminal charge(s). Appearances where all charges were withdrawn or dismissed prior to adjudication are presented as ‘not adjudicated’. In terms of finalised charges, each receives an outcome individually.

In this report, matters which are committed or transferred to another court are not considered finalised at that point. Those which are finalised in a higher or other court during the reference period are presented in that jurisdiction only.

Appearances

In 2024–25, there was a total of 6,381 finalised appearances of child defendants in all Queensland criminal courts. Compared with 2023–24 (7,325), this represents an overall decrease of 12.9% (or –944 appearances). While child appearances decreased in all courts, the decline was most apparent in the Magistrates Court, where numbers decreased by 13.5% (–912 appearances). (Table 4 and Figure 2).

Despite the overall decrease in child appearances, the proportion resulting in conviction remained steady (67.3% in 2024–25 compared with 67.5% in the previous year).

Distinct defendants

In 2024–25, there were 2,980 distinct young people aged 10 years and over who had a proven charge finalised in a Queensland court. This is a decrease of 303 persons (–9.2%) from the previous year, which saw 3,283 distinct young people with a proven charge finalised. Serious Repeat Offenders continue to be responsible for a disproportionate amount of offending by young people in Queensland — accounting for 47.9% of all proven charges finalised.

Due to the time it takes to have charges heard and finalised in court, there will be some young people aged 18 years and over at time of finalisation who are dealt with in the youth justice system. In addition, detention counts include young people aged 18 years and over who are completing their detention orders in a youth detention centre for offences that were committed as a juvenile.

Young males continue to outnumber young females, accounting for between 70 and 72 per cent of all distinct child defendants with a proven charge finalised (Table 5).

Seventeen-year-olds remained the largest single age group with a proven charge finalised in a Queensland court in 2024–25, for offences committed as a juvenile. This age group accounted for 750 (25.0%) young people with a proven charge finalised, while 16-year-olds accounted for 653 (22.0%) young people convicted during the year. Only 382 (13.0%) young people were aged 18 years or older at the time of finalisation. (Table 6).

A small proportion of offenders (18.0%) in 2024–25 was disproportionately responsible for 47.9 per cent of proven offences committed by young people in Queensland (Figure 4). These young people (Serious Repeat Offenders) are identified using the Serious Repeat Offender Index, which takes into account a young person's recent offending history (including offending frequency and seriousness), the time a young person has spent in custody, and their age.

Note:
In this figure a young person is defined as a Serious Repeat Offender if they scored higher than 6 on the Serious Repeat Offender Index (SROI) on any day during the 2024–25 financial year. The SROI is a 'point in time' measurement that represents the volume/seriousness of a young person's recent offending behaviour. The SROI provides a score as at a particular measurement date for all young people who, as at the relevant measurement date:

- were alleged to have committed an offence in the previous 12 months that was subsequently referred to a restorative justice process by Queensland Police or heard in a Queensland court, and
- were aged 10–17 years, and
- were not deceased, and
- had either a proven offence or a referral to a restorative justice process in their lifetime, or one or more adjourned charges still waiting finalisation in court.

SROI scores take into account the young person's age at that measurement date, as well as the young person's offending (including seriousness, frequency, clustering and recency) and custody nights over the 24 months leading up to that measurement date. Higher index scores indicate more serious/frequent offending behaviour. Young people with scores of 6 or above are considered a 'Serious Repeat Offender' (as at that measurement date).

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander distinct defendants

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people accounted for more than half (55%) of all distinct young people with a proven charge finalised in 2024–25. This is consistent compared with previous periods (Figure 5).

Males accounted for 72.0% of all young people with a proven charge finalised in 2024–25. Amongst young people with a proven charge finalised in 2024–25, Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander males (38.0%) made up a slightly larger proportion than other males (34.0%). Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander females (16.0%) made up a larger proportion than other females (11.0%).

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people with a proven offence finalised continue to outnumber other young people in all age groups, with the exception of 17-year-olds. The disproportionate representation is particularly evident in the younger age groups (10–14 years).

The total conviction rate per 1,000 Queensland population aged 10–17 years has decreased since 2021–22. However, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people continue to be disproportionately represented, being 12.5 times as likely as other young people to have had a proven charge finalised in a Queensland Court in 2024–25 (Table 8).

Table 8 Rate of distinct young people convicted, by Indigenous status, all courts

(b) 'Other' includes those who do not identify as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander, and those whose Indigenous status is unknown or not stated.

(c) 'Over-representation' is calculated by dividing the unrounded rate per population for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people by the unrounded rate per population figures for 'other' young people. 'Over-representation' figures indicate the number of times as likely an Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander young person is to have a proven finalised charge, as compared to non-Indigenous/other young people. Rate ratios are based on unrounded figures.

Charges

In 2024–25, the average number of charges per finalised appearance of a child defendant increased slightly, from 6.8 to 6.9, compared with the previous year. Magistrates (Childrens) Court increased marginally to 7.1 charges per finalised appearance, while in the District Court the average number per appearance increased from 2.7 to 6.5 charges. (Table 9 and Table 4)

Of all charges adjudicated in 2024–25, the offence divisions with the largest number of charges against child defendants were theft with 11,161 charges (30.1%), offences against justice procedures and orders with 8,872 charges (24.0%) and burglary with 6,357 charges (17.2%). In total, these three offence types accounted for more than two-thirds (71.3%) of all charges adjudicated in childrens courts in 2024–25. (See Appendix Table A1 for more details.)

Penalties

In 2024–25, of the 5,238 adjudicated appearances of child defendants in Queensland courts, 4,295 (82.0%) resulted in conviction compared with 4,942 (81.6%) in 2023–24 (Table 12).

Detention was the most serious penalty imposed in 375 (8.7%) convicted child appearances in 2024–25, and a further 266 (6.2%) resulted in a conditional release order. Probation as the most serious penalty represented the largest proportion of convicted appearances at 33.1% (or 1,423), followed by reprimand and other minor penalties (31.6% or 1,357), while 9.1% (or 389) resulted in a good behaviour order.

Cautions

In 2024–25, there was a decline in cautions administered to youth offenders by police, with a total of 14,086 cautions, representing 2,295 fewer (–14.0%) than in the previous year (Table 13). Despite this decline, cautions accounted for 28.2% of all police actions taken against youth offenders in 2024–25, a small increase compared with 27.0% in the previous year.

Theft continued to be the offence type most frequently resulting in a caution, with 4,099 cautions administered in 2024–25 for theft, accounting for more than a quarter (29.1%) of all cautions administered. The most substantial year-on-year percentage change was in cautions administered for robbery, blackmail, and extortion, with 44.2% less (–191) than in the previous year. This offence type accounted for 1.7% of all cautions administered in 2024–25, down from 2.6% in 2023–24. While increases in cautions were seen for both harm or endanger persons (up 8.7%) and traffic and vehicle offences (up 29.3%), their proportion of the total cautions administered remained stable at 2.9% and 1.5% respectively. The number of cautions administered for drug offences decreased by 743 (–43.9%) following the introduction of a drug diversion warning in May 2023 for an offender's first minor drug offence<sup>57</sup>. Drug diversion warnings were issued to 1,852 youth in 2024–25, the first full year since their implementation. Further, cautions administered to young offenders in 2024–25 for sexual offences were down by 34.7% (or –287) compared with the previous year.

<sup>57</sup> Amendments included in the Police Powers and Responsibilities and Other Legislation Amendment Act (No. 2) 2023 expanded the Police Drug Diversion Program to include minor possession of all types of drugs (and/or drug utensils) and implemented a tiered response to minor drug possession offences. Police officers can now issue a warning and referral to support service for first offence. On the giving of the drug diversion warning, the minor drugs matter (the subject of the minor drugs offence) is forfeited to the State.

Restorative justice processes

In 2024–25, a total of 1,916 distinct young people were referred to a restorative justice process. This represents a 14 per cent decrease from 2023–24. Restorative justice processes include group conferencing (for offences which include an offender and victim) and alternative diversion processes (for offences which do not include a victim).

Of the 1,916 young people, 44 per cent identified as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander, which represents a decrease from the previous year (47%).

In 2024–25, a total of 1,455 distinct young people participated in a restorative justice process. Of these young people, 38 per cent identified as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander, a decrease from the previous year (44%).

Theft was the most common offence type conferenced in 2024–25 (2,360), followed by burglary (1,023) and assault (565). Together, these three offence types accounted for over half (55.9%) of all offences for which a restorative justice process was held in the period (Table 14).

THE COURTS

Time lapsed to finalise court proceedings

For charges finalised in 2024–25, the average time taken to finalise proceedings in the Magistrates (Childrens) Court was 112 days, which is 27 days more than the 85 days taken in 2023–24 (Table 15).

By comparison, the average time to finalise proceedings in the Childrens Court of Queensland in 2024–25 was 291 days from the date of first mention in a Magistrates (Childrens) Court, which is 18 days less than the average time in 2023–24 (309 days).

Childrens Court of Queensland

The Childrens Court of Queensland finalised 2,527 charges in 534 appearances of child defendants in 2024–25. Just under half of these appearances related to defendants aged 17 years and older (49.1%), and over a third were aged 15–16 years (37.1%) (Table 16).

Finalised appearances in this court decreased for defendants aged 14, 16 and 17 years in 2024–25 compared with the previous year.

Magistrates Court

There were 5,831 finalised appearances of child defendants in Queensland Magistrates Courts in 2024–25. A further 472 appearances resulted in committal to a higher court for trial or sentence, a decrease of 13.5% compared with 2023–24. Of the 4,764 appearances that were adjudicated, 3,841 (80.6%) resulted in conviction and 923 (19.4%) in acquittal, compared with 80.4% and 19.6% respectively in the previous year (Table 24).

Of the 34,802 charges against child defendants adjudicated in the Magistrates Court, 32,012 (92.0%) were convicted (proven), while 2,790 (8.0%) were acquitted, the same proportions as those in the previous year.

The difference between the 472 appearances of child defendants committed to a higher court in 2024–25 and the 550 finalised appearances in the higher courts in the same period is accounted for by ex officio indictments and matters committed to a higher court in 2023–24 but finalised in 2024–25.

Table 25 shows the number of finalised appearances decreased by 13.5% (–912 appearances) in 2024–25 compared with 2023–24. Defendants aged 17 years and over accounted for over a third of all finalised appearances (33.8% or 1,971 appearances) in the Magistrates (Childrens) Court in 2024–25. Appearances of defendants in all age groups decreased in 2024–25 compared with the previous year. Those aged 17 years decreased by 18.4% (–318 appearances), and 15 years decreased by 13.4% (–177 appearances).

Distinct young males commencing a supervised youth justice order outnumber young females by approximately three to one. This pattern has remained consistent over time.

In 2024–25, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people accounted for 65 per cent of all distinct young offenders commencing a supervised youth justice order. This represents a 2 percentage point decrease from the previous year.

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people were 18.9 times as likely as other young people to commence a supervised youth justice order in 2024–25 (Table 34).

(b) ‘Other’ includes young people who do not identify as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander, or whose status is unknown or not stated.

(c) ‘Over-representation’ is calculated by dividing the unrounded rate per population for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people by the unrounded rate per population figures for ‘other’ young people. ‘Over-representation’ figures indicate the number of times as likely an Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander young person is to commence a supervised youth justice order, as compared to other young people.

Probation was the most prevalent order type, averaging over half of all supervised youth justice orders commenced between 2021–22 and 2024–25. Community service orders as a proportion of all order types have slightly decreased over the same time, representing 12 per cent of orders in 2021–22, and 11 per cent of orders commenced in 2024–25. Detention orders (excluding suspended detention) has seen an increase from nine per cent in 2021–22 to 13 per cent in 2024–25 (Table 35).

(a) Data are a count of orders commenced, not a count of distinct young people, as an individual may commence more than one supervised order during a reference year.

(b) Detention order counts exclude suspended detention orders associated with a conditional release order.

(c) Court-ordered graffiti removal orders exclude graffiti removal program referrals by police and as a result of youth justice conference agreements.

(d) Intensive supervision orders (ISOs) are a sentencing option for offenders aged between 10 and 12 years where the court considers that the child, unless subject to an intensive period of supervision and support in the community, is likely to commit further offences. ISOs can only be ordered in cases where the young person has been found guilty of an offence that if committed by an adult would make the adult liable to imprisonment.

Conditional bail

The number of conditional bail programs commenced decreased by seven per cent in the 2024–25 financial year and is the lowest it has been in the four years shown (Table 36).

Community supervision

Most community-based supervised orders that commenced in 2023–24 were successfully completed by the end of 2024–25 (87% of probation orders, 68% of restorative justice orders, and 63% of community service orders, the three most prevalent community-based order types).

Around one in five probation (22%), and around one in four community service orders (24%), were subject to breach action before the successful or unsuccessful completion of the order. Around 50 per cent of all conditional release orders were subject to breach action before the successful or unsuccessful completion of the order (Table 38).

Young people in youth detention

'Youth detention' refers to young people held in a Queensland Youth Detention Centre on sentenced and unsentenced custody. The average daily number of young people in youth detention in 2024–25 was 285, one fewer than in the previous year. (Figure 12).

(a) The average daily number of young people in youth detention is calculated based on the number who were physically located in a detention centre at 11:59pm on each day during the period.

Young males continue to outnumber young females in youth detention, accounting for between 86 and 89 per cent of all young people in youth detention on average in any given financial year.

The proportion of young females in youth detention was marginally higher in 2024–25 (14%) than in 2023–24 (13%).

(a) As a result of rounding, discrepancies may occur between sums of the component items in Figure 13 and the totals in Figure 12.

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people continue to be overrepresented in youth detention, accounting for between 66 and 72 per cent of young people in youth detention on an average day over the last four years (Figure 14). In 2024–25, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people accounted for 72 per cent of those in youth detention on an average day. This represents a 1-percentage point increase compared to the previous period (71%).

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people were 26 times as likely as other young people to have been in youth detention in 2024–25. This is the highest rate in the last four years.

(b) 'Other' includes young people who do not identify as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander, and those whose status is unknown or not stated.
(c) 'Over-representation' is calculated by dividing the unrounded rate per population for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people by the unrounded rate per population figures for 'other' young people. 'Over-representation' figures indicate the number of times as likely an Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander young person is to commence a supervised youth justice order, as compared to other young people. Rate ratios are based on unrounded figures.

Unsentenced youth detention

The average daily number of young people in youth detention in unsentenced custody saw an increase to 252 per day in 2024–25, compared with 246 in the previous year. The average daily number of young people in sentenced detention decreased to 33 per day compared with 40 in the previous year (Figure 18).

Most young people in youth detention on an average day in 2024–25 were in unsentenced detention (88%). This figure is slightly higher than in the previous year (86%).

In 2024–25, the average length of time a young person spent in youth detention per unsentenced episode was 54 days, which is six days longer than in 2023–24 (48 days). The average length is based on unsentenced periods of youth detention that concluded in each financial year. The average length of unsentenced episodes in youth detention has been steadily increasing over the last four years. (Table 40)

Of all finalised appearances in 2024–25 at which a detention order was made, 46.1 per cent resulted in a young offender being released from court following sentencing, with no time remaining to serve in custody. In 26.3% of all appearances resulting in a detention order, the offender was not required to serve a supervised release order. This reflects the number of detention orders that had been served as pre-sentence custody. Of all sentencing events resulting in detention orders, 53.9% involved the offender serving a period of custody following sentencing (Table 41).

VICTIMS OF YOUTH OFFENDERS

Data relating to victims of youth offenders in 2024–25 were extracted from Queensland Police Service administrative data. They represent all occurrences where at least one of the alleged offenders was aged 10–17 years when the crime was recorded. The data relate only to offences against the person and all victims data are presented in that context in this report.

In 2024–25, there was a total of 4,717 recorded victims of personal offences where at least one offender was aged 10–17 years. Of all victims whose age was recorded (4,712), almost half were aged 18 years or younger (2,078 or 44.1%), and those aged 14 years or under accounted for almost a quarter of all victims (1,162 or 24.7%). This age group is notably vulnerable and represented the largest victim proportions for sexual offences (61.0%), robbery, blackmail and extortion (23.1%) and assault (21.5%). Only 1 in 10 victims of youth offenders was aged 50 years or older (11.2%) in 2024–25.

Assault was the predominant personal offence type among all victims, constituting 3,500 or 74.2% of all personal offences involving youth offenders. Of all victims of this offence type whose age and sex were recorded (3,492), those aged 10–14 and 30–39 years were victimised most often (713 or 20.4%, and 595 or 17.0% respectively) in 2024–25. The most prevalent victim group was females aged 10–14 years (423), closely followed by males aged 30–39 years (337). There were more female than male victims of assault in every age group except those aged 0–9 years, 20–24 years, 25–29 years and 30–39 years. Nevertheless, the gender distribution of victimisation was more balanced overall, females representing 51.3% and males 48.7% of all victims of this offence type by youth offenders in 2024–25. (Figure 19).

The second most prevalent offence type among victims of youth offenders was robbery, blackmail, and extortion, at 12.8% (604) of all victims in 2024–25. Almost two-thirds (378 or 63.3%) of victims of this offence type whose age and sex were recorded (597) were male. One in two victims (49.7%) were aged between 9 and 18 years. The most prevalent age group of victims of this offence type was those aged 10–14 years (138 victims or 23.1%), with males representing the largest single victim group for this offence type by age and sex (96 victims). The other significant victim group was victims aged 50 years old and over, accounting for 15.4% of all victims (45 female and 47 male victims). (Figure 20).

In total, there were 353 victims of sexual offences by youth offenders in 2024–25, accounting for 7.5% of all victims of youth offenders (Figure 21). Of the victims whose age and sex were recorded (349 victims), more than three-quarters were female (267 or 76.5%). Females aged 15 years and younger accounted for the largest victim group of sexual offences by youth offenders (182 or 52.1%), despite this cohort accounting for only 18.1% of victims across all personal offence types. Moreover, almost three-quarters (72.2%) of sexual offences victims were aged 15 years or younger, and almost half were aged 10–14 years (45.6%). One in six victims were under 10 years old (54 or 15.5%), and sexual offences was the only personal offence type where this age group represented such a high proportion of victims.
